WHAT THE Y.M.C.A. DOES FOR OUR BOYS OVERSEAS

LETTER FROM GRANT L. PAUL.

Pawpots, Myddleton, Ilkley, Yorkshire.

My Dear People :—

I got a leave for eight days from Reville the day before yesterday, and started off to London. But even London gets a bit tiresome when one knows absolutely none there, and I was loafing about Trafalgar Square with nothing to do, and feeling "aw-fly blawed, don't you know," when the Y.M.C.A. nailed me. A sergeant of the Y.M. from Toronto asked me if I would like to go to a pink tea fight. "Sure" I said, "I'll try anything once." When he saw that I had nothing to do he asked me if I would live to spend the week in the country in a nice home. Did I jump at it—raw-ther. I was paraded immediately before a lady who had something to do with this sort of thing and she decided that Yorkshire was the best place for me. So the Y.M.C.A. arranged everything.

It was about 10 a. m. when they grabbed me and they took me to the Aldwych for lunch, to the aforesaid pink tea in the afternoon, and a show in the evening. Yesterday morning the sergeant called around to my club with a half fare voucher to Ilkley, so I left Kings Cross at 10.10 yesterday. I was given a ticket introducing Pte. Paul to Mrs. Whitaker, Hill-side, Myddleton, Ilkley. Well I changed stations instead of cars at Leeds and arrived half an hour too soon. I waited at Ilkley station fifteen minutes, then started off to find my house. I was sent in a different direction by each person I asked, but eventually I found it about 7 p. m.

Now Mrs. Whitaker, it appears, is one of these "sports" who became secretary of the hospitality league, and then forgot all about it. This week-end she is away at some watering place, leaving poor Mr. Whitaker all alone, with nothing to do but play golf. When he got the telegram announcing my arrival he thought his wife was "pulling his leg," for he had never heard of the scheme, so he thought no more of it until I arrived with a haversack at his door. He had me in to dinner, but of course he could not look after me all alone, so he phoned about and this is where I am planted.

It is the grandest view imaginable, way up the side of Ben Rhyddan, a famous hill, we are right in the middle of the Yorkshire Moors. At present they are covered with blue-bells and are beautiful.

I really can't write any more just now or I shall be late for breakfast.

GRANT.

SUNDAY EVENING.

I did not get this letter off, as I had hoped, so will go right on. I am really enjoying this as I never enjoyed a holiday before. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Salitt and Miss Mary. (Mary wears a diamond ring, and is engaged to a young officer convalescing near here). They are really the most hospitable and the kindest people I have ever seen. They have a Serbian refugee, a Mr. Dankarovich, staying with them. He is an awfully nice boy, twenty years old. He has had some terrible adventures. When the Austrians and Bulgarians overran his country, he, with about twenty others, started to walk over the mountains to Durazzo. Only a half dozen or so reached Albania—the rest perished by the wayside. He is one of the Serbian students studying English manufactures, for the restoration of Serbia after the war. His father was a great woollen manufacturer at Leskoatz, near Nish, but his factory has been destroyed. Yesterday he and Mr. Salitt went with me for a long walk over the moors. The country about here is very wild, with only a few goats about, and farm houses about as thick as in Canada. It is very rocky, houses, fences and everything being built of stone. We had dinner at Bolton Abbey, a beautiful ruined church, on the estate of the Duke of Devonshire. The Duke owns most of the country hereabouts.

After that we crossed Ben Rhyddan, via a hamlet called Blubberhouses, and back home again about twenty-two miles. I have never seen such grand views as the moors afford.

This morning we went to the old parish church, a beautiful place, with Crusaders' tombs all about the wall. I had a good deal of difficulty following the service, but I got along O.K. I would much sooner stay here than I would at Mr. Whitaker's, they are so much more like home. Mr. Whitaker was very much astonished that I did not drink whiskey and soda (of which he was very fond) and it was indeed difficult to refuse his Burgundy wine, which he told me was the same as the King used.

The garden is very beautiful here, not all marked off with mathematical precision in circular beds, but every kind of beautiful flowers growing almost wild. By the way, what is the name of that climbing rose we had on the kitchen? They would like to be able to get some.

Also staying here are two twins, eight years old, relatives, named Edward and Flora. Their father is a clergyman in some church near Liverpool, and they are awfully pale

Weeds and Incompetence

Editor, The Express,
Napanee, Ont.

Sir:—In addressing another letter to you on the subject of weeds on the streets, and through your valuable paper, the Mayor, Councillors and the public of Napanee, I feel assured that you will gladly devote the space, if by so doing our streets can be made cleaner, healthier and more pleasant to look upon.

As a proof that the Mayor and Town Council evidently desire to do what they can to make some improvement the town's scythe was set in operation on Monday morning and the people appreciated the effort. But alas, the mowed-down weeds instead of being immediately gathered up and burned so as to destroy the seeds, are still lying where they fell, so that the seeds will ripen and drop on the ground and provide a crop for next year. This shows incompetence on the part of some person or persons unknown to the writer.

NEW DRIVE EXPECTED

Allies Look For Attack on Flanders Front.

Paris Is Still Safe and German Losses In Recent Offensive Were So Large That They Are Likely to Resume Effort to Take French Capital for Some Time.

PARIS, June 18.—Paris became easier once more. The city has heard the good tidings that the enemy being held, that the bars are definitely up on the Noyon-Montdidier front.

This announcement is made with great assurance by the best qualified spokesmen on military matters. Maurice Barres, who gleaned information from the best sources, declared concerning the German drive on Paris:

"It is finished. They will recommence it in six weeks, perhaps in months. Meanwhile they will lie elsewhere."

Regarding the latter affirmation there is also a unanimity of opinion. The enemy is out of breath, somewhat weakened by blood-letting. His latest rush was, perhaps, most furious, but also the briefest, lasting only five days, whereas average of the previous offensives was double that time. Undoubtedly he gained some ground, but the price he paid is suicidal.

For the allies the only factors are the Germans' double desire to rush Compiègne and to the French strategic reserves will reach.

The enormity of the German loss is guaranteed by official documents in the hands of the French command. Of what nature the disclosures can be inferred from the following:

"A Prussian regiment engaged in the Rons-sur-Matz counted in the evening of the fight scarcely men."

The ever-increasing importance of tanks and air squadrons is eloquently demonstrated by the recent combats. Thanks to the tanks, the French were able to drive wedge to their opponents' flanks, obtain the main gains.

Thanks to the concerted action of the French infantry and the squadrons, the foe's numerical superiority of bayonets is counterbalanced. A striking example of this occurred on June 2 when a squadron of score airplanes, carrying 4 bombs, crushed troops massing for a big attack.

German troops attempted during the night to cross the Matz near the Oise but were halted by fire of the French, says yesterday's War Office statement. In localities northeast of the woods of Oise, south of Dammard and the region of Vinly (northwest of Chât Thierry), the French took 70 prisoners and a number of machine guns.

French troops have re-occupied Coevures-et-Valsery (southwest of Soissons), an important strategic point, from which the Germans have been endeavoring to debouch troops. The War Office announcement of this adds that ground also been gained around Montdidier.

Checked in their plunge against French positions from Montdidier the Oise, the Germans have not resumed their offensive on the western front. There have been patrol counters at various points, with allies improving their positions, notably in the Villers-Cotterets region southwest of Soissons.

The inactivity of the infantry

Attacking Dutch Ships.

LONDON, June 18. — The British Admiralty announces that the within five miles of where the D hospital ship Koningen Regentes sunk has been searched and no mines have been found. But between 2 and 7, nine newly-moored German mines were swept up in the track only by Dutch ships engaged repatriating British and German prisoners.

"It seems clear," says the statement of the Admiralty, "that mines were laid to catch repatriating vessels on their passage west, that the submarine which laid it remained in the route to sink ships on the eastern journey, if already sunk with British repatriating prisoners. It is remarkable there were no German prisoners the Koningen Regentes on this trip."

ROME, June 18.—Harmonious enthusiasm marked Saturday's session of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, at which the Socialist leader, Turati, declared all political lines must be obliterated until victory was achieved at the front.

Points of Premier Orlando's communication were as follows:

"That Italy's solidarity with the oppressed nationalities of Austria was evidenced by the Czecho-Slovak battalions now fighting side by side with the Italian soldiers; also by the urgent appeal of the Jugo-Slavs of Roumania, to be allowed to join Italy in fighting the common enemy.

"Second, that the enemy's order of the day to the Austrian officers, which has fallen into the hands of the Italian command, says: 'All of the forces and resources of the Austrian monarchy are now for the first time being employed entirely against one enemy; the entire Italian front is to be attacked. In France the war has developed into a movement which will lead to the occupation of a country rich in food and resources. For our part, therefore, let us advance to Verona.'"

In the course of his statement, Premier Orlando referred to the announcement which was made by him about a fortnight ago that the Central Powers had made overtures to Italy for a separate peace. The Premier's comment that this proposal had been promptly rejected by the Italian Government was greeted by an enthusiastic demonstration.

Advices do not indicate the nature of the temptations held out to Italy, but reports current at the time the news was given of this attempt to break the solidarity of the Entente Alliance indicated that Emperor Charles was the prime mover in the attempt at peace negotiations and that he had held out a promise of extension of the Italian border northward in recognition of Italy's predominating influence over the eastern shore of the Adriatic, besides some minor concessions relating to the status of Italian subjects in Austria.

"The Italian troops and their Allies are holding the enemy strongly, tenaciously resisting him in the new offensive and making repeated counter-attacks," said Premier Orlando in a statement in the Chamber of Deputies.

MET TERRIBLE DEATH.

Harrowing Story of Fate of German U-Boat Pirates.

LONDON, June 18.—Harrowing details of the destruction of one of the largest and more recently constructed German submarines are given in a despatch from a neutral correspondent. This submarine was one of the last to leave Zebrugge before the entrance to the harbor was blocked by British forces.

The U-boat struck a mine, and out of the crew of 40 only two survived on reaching the surface after a terrible struggle with death for an hour and a half 20 fathoms below the surface. Some of the crew committed suicide, having lost all hope of leaving the boat alive.

The only chance of escaping was to force open the conning tower and the forward hatches and trust to the compression of air in one part of the vessel to force each man like a torpedo to the surface. The air pressure in the submarine had become so high that the great majority of the Germans could not keep their

AUSTRIANS ARE HELD

Bitter Struggle Is Raging Along the Piave.

Main Attack of the Teutons In Italy Has Been Halted by the Allies, Who Are Now the Aggressors—Counter Strokes In Hill Country Meet With Success.

LONDON, June 18.—Not alone are the Italians and their British and French comrades in arms holding in check the Austrian offensive along the greater part of the 100-mile battle front from the region southeast of Trent to the Adriatic Sea, but they themselves have turned aggressors on some of the more important sectors, especially in the mountain regions.

Counter-attacks in the hill country on the north at several points have resulted in the occupation by the Allies of ground won from them in the initial onslaught and the rectification of their lines, while a stiffening of the front along the Piave river has rendered impossible for the time being, at least, further fording of the stream by the enemy.

Hard fighting is still in progress, however, with the Austrians bringing the strongest kind of pressure to bear against the allied armies on both the northern and eastern parts of the battlefield in an endeavor to reach the lines and gain access in force to the plains.

The strokes of the enemy are particularly violent on the Montello plateau, the highest bit of ground along the middle reaches of the Piave, the capture of which would give him command of the roads leading through Treviso to Venice and a fair way westward through the province of Treviso. The Italians are inflicting heavy casualties on the troops of Emperor Charles which crossed the river at this point.

To the south from Standrea to Fossalata, respectively the northern and southern flanks of the famous Zenson loop where last year the Austrians effected a crossing of the Piave, only later to be driven back with sanguinary losses, and from Fossalata to San Dona di Piave, the fighting also is of a violent character; with the Italians heroically and successfully holding the line of the river.

Between Candellu and the Zenson loop where the Austrians crossed the Piave in Saturday's fighting the Italians have driven them back to the river bank and are endeavoring to push them across the stream. The latest Austrian official communication records the gain of additional ground west of San Dona di Piave and the capture of the village of Capo Sile, on the eastern edge of the lagoon region in the province of Venetia, and about twenty miles from the city of Venice itself.

Thus far the Italians, British and French troops have made prisoner of more than 4,500 Austrians, while the Austrian War Office asserts that 12,000 prisoners have been taken by the Austrians.

Austrian troops who had as their objective on the British front the range of hills, including Cima di Fonte, Pau and Cavaletto, telegraphs Reuter's correspondent at Italian headquarters, were much discomfited before reaching the British wire entanglements. In front of the Cesuna positions the Austrians suffered heavily from the British machine gun fire, and they were also caught by their own artillery, which fired short.

The Austro-Hungarian casualties, the correspondent says, are being

The only chance of escaping was to force open the conning tower and the forward hatches and trust to the compression of air in one part of the vessel to force each man like a torpedo to the surface. The air pressure in the submarine had become so high that the great majority of the Germans could not keep their mouths closed.

The compressed air shot them to the surface, and hardly had they reached the sea level when the air pressure burst their lungs and about 20 of them sank like stones. The survivors described the yells of the men, when the end came, as the most horrible noise they had ever heard.

The attention of a British trawler was attracted, and it hastened to the rescue. The condition of the survivors showed that their experiences in the submarine had been of a dreadful character.

GERMANS ARE BOASTING.

Will Make President Wilson's Mar- row "Run Cold."

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Boast- ing and threatening comment of the German newspapers on the appear- ance of submarines off the American coast is summarized in a statement issued yesterday by the State Depart- ment.

One paper, not named in the sum- mary, declared the present raids were but the beginning, and added:

"There will be scenes in the United States that will make the mar- row in Wilson's bones run cold."

Another said: "The Americans are already trembling in fear of German air attacks, and the time may not be far distant when American ports will be bombarded."

Referring to the "submarine ob- struction to transportation of Amer- ican troops to France," the German editors failed to mention the char- acter of vessels attacked by the raiders or the fact that the move- ment of troop convoys has not been interfered with in the slightest de- gree by the U-boats.

Mercantile Cruiser Patia Sunk.

LONDON, June 18. — The British armed mercantile cruiser Patia (6,103 tons) was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine on June 13, according to an announcement made by the British Admiralty last night. One officer and fifteen men are pre- sumed to have been drowned.

Austrian troops had had their ob- jective on the British front the range of hills, including Cima di Fonte, Pau and Cavaletto, telegraphs Reuter's correspondent at Italian headquarters, were much discom- fited before reaching the British wire entanglements. In front of the Ce- suna positions the Austrians suffered heavily from the British machine gun fire, and they were also caught by their own artillery, which fired short.

The Austro-Hungarian casualties, the correspondent says, are being reckoned in thousands, while those of the British are very light. The number of prisoners taken by the British has been increased to 400. Besides re-establishing their line, the British patrols again are pushing out into No Man's Land.

The plan of the enemy is as fol- lows: While the army of Gen. Con- rad, on the Asiago plateau, tries to break through the Italian defences along the Brenta and come down to Bassano, Gen. Kuchbach is endeavor- ing to cross the Piave and cut the roads which are protecting the Italian lines along the river. The enemy hopes, through a great pincer move- ment of attack, to break the com- pact order of the Italian army. The stronger attack is being made against the defences of Montello and along the right bank of the Piave.

Peace at Any Price.

LONDON, June 18.—Reports of a serious crisis in Austria are current to-day. They come from various out- side sources, but there is no direct confirmatory news.

A news message from the semi- official Fabra Agency of Madrid says private information from reliable sources state that grave events are about to occur in Austria, where the population is demanding peace at any price.

Demand Release of Canadians.

LONDON, June 18.—Because the German delegates at the British-Ger- man War Prisoners' Conference at The Hague are pressing for the re- turn of all prisoners in Canada and Africa, as well as those in Great Bri- tain, a hitch has occurred in the ne- gotiations, telegraphs the correspon- dent at the Dutch capital of the Times. The difficulties of such a course, it is contended by the British delegates, particularly in respect of shipping transport, make it imprac- ticable. The negotiations have now reached a most critical stage.

Red Guards Were Slain.

AMSTERDAM, June 18. — Gen. Knoerzer, in a telegram to Gen. Eich- horn, the German commander in the Ukraine, says a message from Kiev reports that forces of about 10,000 Bolshevik Red Guards, commanded by Czech officers, have been almost wiped out by German troops to the west of Taganrog, a Russian port on the north shore of the Sea of Azov.

President Wilson expressed the hope that the Senate would pass the woman suffrage amendment at the present session of Congress.

A Terrible Explosion.

AMSTERDAM, June 18. — Much damage was caused in Kiev, the Uk- rainian capital, by an explosion in the munition works there on June 8, says the Lokal Anzeiger, of Berlin. There were 12 big explosions and several smaller ones, lasting from ten o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon.

The Svjerinetz cathedral collapsed like a pack of cards, houses were blown over, and the streets turned into smouldering masses of debris, while the neighborhood of the munitions plant was a sea of fire. The Toliski convent was destroyed.

Romantic Leader of Sinn Feiners

THE slender figure of Eamonn de Valera, Sinn Fein leader, is thrown against the horizon in Ireland these days. The Sinn Feiners won several elections last summer, and there has been considerable disorder in various parts of the island. John Redmond's steady advocacy of the war cause, though now ended by his premature death, had a steady influence, while the denunciation of Sinn Feinism by Cardinal Logue last December was thought to be a potent move towards a settlement. Cardinal Logue, the Primate of All Ireland, issued a pastoral in which he poured out his anger against "a dream no sober man can hope to see realized, namely, the establishment of an Irish republic, either by an appeal to the potentates of Europe at the peace conference, or by hurling an unarmed people against an empire of five millions under arms — a thing which would be ridiculous if it were not so mischievous and fraught with so much danger to an ardent, generous, and patriotic people."

Meantime, who is de Valera, whose leadership seems so to inspire and inflame so many of the youth of Ireland? He is member of Parliament for East Clare, elected last summer, and is described as an "American-Spanish-Irishman."

"He is most frequently described nowadays by others than his own following as 'the Stormy Petrel of Sinn Fein,'" says the Chicago Tribune. "Even before de Valera had won his sensational election victory in East Clare, where he captured for Sinn Fein, by a majority of 2,975, the seat that the late Major William Redmond, a popular hero, had held for the Nationalists, it had been predicted that this perfervid advocate of Irish republicanism pure and simple would soon supersede the venerable Count Plunkett as leader of the 'Ourselves Alone' party. This on the ground that extreme movements always advance at the gait of the quickest marchers."

"Now that in direct consequence of de Valera's triumph following the victories of Sinn Feiners in South Longford and North Roscommon, there is talk that the Irish Nationalist party may resign in a body and let the country as a whole express its opinion on the Sinn Fein policy, Count Plunkett's supersession by his younger comrade is virtually certain. That kindly, elderly insurrectionist simply cannot stand the pace set by Eamonn de Valera, the darling of the Jacobins of to-day in Ireland. De Valera will not even consider what, in England, is thought the Count's one cogent idea of an independent Sinn Fein representation at the world conference which is to endeavor to establish firmly the foundations of peace after the World War."

"De Valera's idea is that of an entirely independent Ireland, the world forgetting if not by the world forgot. In the contest that resulted in Eamonn de Valera's being elected to represent East Clare in the Imperial Parliament, the Sinn Feiners made no secret of their aims. They are out, in the first place, to smash constitutionalism, for which the Parliamentary party stands; and, in the second place, to wage war, until, as picturesque a figure as the romantic Countess Markievicz, he was condemned, like her, to penal servitude for life, and, like her, released in the general amnesty to Sinn Fein prisoners."

"De Valera's Irish patriotism appears to be all the more intense by reason of the fact that he was born in New York, and that his father, Vivian de Valera, was a Spaniard. His mother, however, whose maiden name was Kate Coll, came from County Limerick. America did not hold Eamonn long, as at the age of two he was taken to Ireland and dwelt with his mother's folk."

"As he grew into boyhood he took every advantage of the somewhat limited schooling available, and afterward he went to Blackrock College, where he was esteemed as much for his athletics as his scholarship. From Blackrock he gained a mathematical science scholarship for the National University. Mathematics is not romantic, but it had an overpowering attraction for the romantic de Valera."

"A more violent passion than mathematics, however, seized upon him when he took up the study of the Gaelic tongue. It became with him an obsession, which was not lessened by his marriage in 1910 to Miss S. O'Flannigan, one of the most capable and enthusiastic propagandist members of the Gaelic League."

"De Valera joined the Irish Volunteers when they were first formed, and later, when the split occurred, took sides with the intransigents against the constitutional body, which followed John Redmond. Gaelic was then put aside as a central interest and de Valera took up military matters with the fiercest energy."

"Eamonn de Valera is thirty-four years of age. In appearance he has the ivory sallowness and deep, passionate eyes of his Spanish descent. He is very tall, very muscular, and full of nervous vitality."

World's Best Beggar.

The London Hospital has a real begging campaign not oftener than every five years. This year is one such quinquennial, and the chairman, Lord Knutsford, the world's record beggar, is in search of a million half-crowns.

"Since the last quinquennial," he writes to the Daily Express. "I have written literally thousands of letters. I have alienated many friends whose friendship towards me was not cheque-deep, and I have been run over by a motor-lorry which brought in £20,000, but is the sort of thing that cannot be done too often."

"Shortly put, we have to raise £150,000 a year, with an endowment of only £30,000 a year to depend on."

"Take but one case—the case of nurses. They are underpaid, and too often not too well fed and badly accommodated. We have recently made a further move towards betterment, but this alone has added £4,000 a year to expenditure."

"I am not wishing to cry 'Wolf.' We mean to keep open doors at the 'London' as long as possible, but if we do not get enough money now to carry on during the next five years, some part of the work must go under."

"If I can collect a million half-crowns by December 1, the birthday of our president, Queen Alexandra, the position will be saved."

Lord Knutsford asks that cheques may be sent to him at the London Hospital, E.1.

British Detective Was

Guard of Many Monarchs

And Terror of Criminals

ONE of the most famous of British detectives, and a man who probably knew more about the international political underground world of London than any other man of his time, died recently, in the person of William Melville.

An Irishman from Kerry, he joined the force as an ordinary police constable, and in his progress to the chief superintendship of the "special" or political branch of the Criminal Investigation Department, at New Scotland Yard, he had to deal with dynamite and anarchist plotters through very troubled times.

A type of the straight, up-to-date detective, employing modern methods, he was never afraid to adopt any new idea that would help him in the successful carrying out of his work. He always recognized the power and usefulness of the press in criminal investigations, and he was never "given away" by any journalist.

One of his invariable duties was that of acting as cicerone to traveling royalties. When the ex-Czar of Russia visited Britain, a few weeks before his marriage, under the able guidance of Melville, he was made acquainted with every phase of the criminal life of the worst areas of London, both East and West. Night after night, in company with his expert guide, the ex-Czar threaded his way in and out of the unsavory haunts of the criminal fraternity, particularly the political criminals of the anarchist type, and never once did he suffer any bodily harm.

Whenever Queen Victoria and Edward VII. visited the continent, despite what their mission may have been, the famous detective accompanied them, wherever they went. And there is a story that he discovered and circumvented at the last moment an anarchist plot to kill the Kaiser during his progress through London.

Naturally such clientele were not slow to show their appreciation. The Shah of Persia astonished him by casually presenting him with one of the largest turquoises in existence. Membership of the Victorian Order was conferred on him in 1903, and only a month before he died he was created a member of the Order of the British Empire, while France, Denmark, Portugal, Italy, Spain and other countries bestowed decorations on him.

Melville's department in the early days dwelt almost exclusively with the Irish-American political offenders, and subsequently with the anarchists. His great proficiency as a linguist, an attainment he had acquired abroad while "keeping an eye" on the ports, was of the utmost service to him in London when he was called upon to watch the doings of a horde of foreign criminals who arrived after being driven out of their own countries.

In the course of these duties he suffered a number of narrow escapes from death or injury at the hands of the desperate criminals he was successful in arresting. Probably one of his narrowest "shaves" was when he captured Meunier, who had killed several people at the Cafe Very in Paris with a bomb. Melville recog-

Some Very Quaint Devices

Worn by the Regiments

Fighting in British Armies

THERE are some very quaint devices worn by the different regiments of the British army. Lions, tigers, bears, elephants, horses, foxes and cats — a fairly representative of the animal world, and the creatures of mythology claim a place, too, as we have the sphinx and dragons of all kinds and colors. How some of the beasts came there is a mystery, but custom has installed them as firm as the battle honors of the corps they represent.

The United States Army artillery man is distinguished from his fellow by the crossed guns on his collar. His British comrade-in-arms wears a flaming grenade; but this distinction is shared by all the sappers, the Grenadier Guards, the eight fusil regiments and the Scots Greys. The old days infantry regiments had a grenadier company, composed of picked men, the Grenadier Guards and the Greys are a relic of this custom as the First Foot Guards received this title and badge as the senior or picked guards regiment, and the Scots Greys were at one time Mounted Grenadiers. The light infantry bugle worn by no fewer than eleven regiments, in one form or another has a similar origin, having been handed down as a distinction of "light" and rifle corps from "light" companies of olden days. There is no difference whatever between an ordinary infantry regiment and one distinguished as light infantry, but the title and badge maintain a cherished distinction for time.

Queen Anne gave to the Norfolk Regiment the badge of Britannia, their gallantry at Amman in Spain and years later, under Wellington this corps inspired considerable respect among the Spaniards by badges on their cross belts, the tides insisting that it represented Virginia. Two regiments have, as a device, the crest of a distinguished general, the Seventh Dragoon Guard that of Lord Ligonier, and the 7th Riding Regiment, the old 13th third Foot, that of the Duke of Wellington. The 33rd was great duke's first command of portance, when, as a young colonel, he first led a regiment in the field.

The origin of the skull and crossbones with the words "or glory" beneath, borne by the Seventeenth Lighters, is as follows: The officer who brought home Gen. Wolfe's spatches from Quebec was ordered to raise a regiment of light dragoons.

dations of peace after the World War.

"De Valera's idea is that of an entirely independent Ireland, the world forgetting if not by the world forgot. In the contest that resulted in Eamonn de Valera's being elected to represent East Clare in the Imperial Parliament, the Sinn Feiners made no secret of their aims. They are out, in the first place, to smash constitutionalism, for which the Parliamentary party stands; and, in the second place, to wage war, until, as they themselves have put it, 'sovereign independence has been won by Ireland.' They claim, and the result of the last three elections shows that there is some foundation for their claim, to be the strongest political party now in Ireland. Unrepresented by choice at the Irish Convention, they will decline to be bound by any decision at which it may arrive.

"Eamonn de Valera, the new republican chief, was one of the few active Sinn Fein leaders who escaped the penalty of death after the Easter-week rising in Dublin in 1915, where in the disposition of battle he was commandant of the ringside area. As

The Kilties.

"I have just come back from forty-eight hours' duty in Paris," writes an officer in a Highland regiment. "My servant and I, both in the kilt, were buying some stuff outside a shop, as one does in Paris, when a crowd of about twenty people gathered round and simply stared — some amused, open-mouthed, and some doubtless in admiration. I was amused at first, but it got a bit too much of a good thing, and my servant, who is a wag, said, 'Shall I hand round the hat, sir?' So, not thinking he would, I said, 'Yes, do,' and — if he didn't whip off his Balmoral and take it round perfectly seriously with a childlike expression on his face. They cleared off all right, some grinning and others looking very sheepish. But we got nothing!"

service to him in London when he was called upon to watch the doings of a horde of foreign criminals who arrived after being driven out of their own countries.

In the course of these duties he suffered a number of narrow escapes from death or injury at the hands of the desperate criminals he was successful in arresting. Probably one of his narrowest "shaves" was when he captured Meunier, who had killed several people at the Cafe Very in Paris with a bomb. Melville recognized him at Victoria Station, and, although unarmed, he at once seized the armed criminal.

Melville held the greatest contempt for such fantastic creations as Sherlock Holmes, and so-called detective authors. "Put a man like that down to a job," he was wont to remark, "and you will find him as useless as a child. Those high brow theories won't work, at least not in practice." Gentlemen detectives shared alike in this contempt. And he was fond of recounting the occasion when Scotland Yard, as an experiment, decided to appoint educated men direct into the detective force without that of Lord Ligonier, and the 7th Riding Regiment, the old Third Third Foot, that of the Duke of Wellington. The thirty-third was the great duke's first command of importance, when, as a young colonel he first led a regiment in the field.

The origin of the skull and crossbones with the words "or glory" beneath, borne by the Seventeenth Lancers, is as follows: The officer who brought home Gen. Wolfe's dispatches from Quebec was ordered to raise a regiment of light dragoons and he chose as a badge this griffin device, still worn by the Seventeenth Lancers.

The elephant frequently seen as a regimental badge, or part of a commemorative service in India, also does the tiger. In the same way the sphinx is an honor gained in the land of the Pyramids, when the Gloucestershire Regiment won their unique distinction of the back badge. For their gallantry when fighting back to back against heavy odds, the privilege of wearing a sphinx on the back of the cap was granted, and the custom is still in vogue. The bear worn by the Warwickshire is the "Bear and Ragged Staff," the heraldic cognizance of the famous Earl of Warwick, the "King Maker" of the history books.

One regiment alone wear the royal arms on their collars—the Norfolk Yeomanry, the King's Own Royal Regiment. The oak leaf the Cheshires recalls the Battle of Dettingen, the last occasion on which a British sovereign took the field in person. The story goes that a company of the old Twenty-Second extinguished His Majesty from a very difficult and awkward predicament during the engagement, and a sharp struggle took place near some oaks. King George bestowed the oak leaf as a badge, in honor of the occasion, and it has been worn ever since. The castle and key worn by so many regiments recalls the heroic defence of Gibraltar, and it is curious that there is a Prussian regiment which has, as one of its badges, a representation of the Rock with the motto "With Elliot fame and victory," the corps having served under Gen. Elliot, afterward Lord Heathfield, during the siege. Napoleon's Eagles find a place on the badges of those regiments who captured the trophies during the Napoleonic wars.

Many of the distinctions of peacetime disappear when the army do its fighting garb; but one or two remain, notably the "feash" worn by the officers of the Royal Welsh. This is a knot of black silk, resembling a fan in shape, and attached to the back of the collar. Its origin is curious, and dates from the old days of hair powder, when a soldier wore greased pigtail down his back. When this picturesque, but useless fashion was abolished, the Royal Welsh were on a long tour of foreign service and when they eventually returned home they still wore their hair in the old way; this was soon altered, but the silk, which was used to protect the scarlet coat from the queue, remained, and is now a cherished privilege. The back badge of the Gloucesters has already received notice and the other quaint customs and devices are laid aside till the army returns to their more peaceful duties.

Soldier's Transport.

Four tons of shipping capacity is required to transport a soldier, another ton is necessary for his equipment. In addition, it takes five pounds of ship capacity a day to keep him supplied with food, clothing and ammunition.

HERE IS THE DAY YOU REGISTER

ON June 22nd, Saturday, every man and woman, resident in Canada, who is 16 years and over, must attend at one of the places provided for registration, between the hours of 7 a.m. and 10 p.m., and there truthfully answer all the questions set forth upon the registration card.

Upon signing the card, vouching for the accuracy of the answers, the man or woman will receive a Registration Certificate, as shown below, which must be carried upon the person thereafter.

Why the Certificate is so Important

For failure to register a maximum fine of $100 and one month's imprisonment is provided, also an added penalty of $10 for each day the person remains unregistered after June 22nd.

Persons remaining unregistered cannot lawfully be employed, and cannot draw wages for work done after June 22nd. Employers who keep unregistered persons in their employ will be liable for fines equal in amount to those recoverable from the unregistered employees.

Unregistered persons cannot lawfully purchase transportation tickets, and may find themselves barred from travelling on railroads, steamboats, etc. Similarly they may be denied board and lodging at any hotel, restaurant, public house or boarding house.

In a word—All persons remaining unregistered, and all persons having dealings with unregistered persons, knowing them to be such, incur heavy penalties under the law.

FLOWERY CLOTHES IN WORLD AT WAR

Gay Apparel Seems Futile at Most Tragic Moment of Savage Conflict.

REVIVAL OF FLOWERED FROCK

Slight Bustle, Colored Taffeta Sashes, Flowing Elbow Sleeves, and Immense Garden Hats, Among Favored Fashions.

New York.—The attempt to Dolly Vardenize our clothes began in Palm Beach in January. As soon as the French openings began in February, we, over here, learned that they, over there, had begun the same trick in costumery, asserts a prominent fashion writer.

Organdies, printed voiles and flowered chiffons were the materials used

Flowered muslin frock that shows return to English garden fashions. It is made of blue and pink muslin. Surplice body ties at back, and neck line is finished with upstanding muslin ruche.

for these frocks, which bore close kinship to a softer epoch than the one in which we take our part today.

It is of psychological interest, this introduction into women's apparel of a kind of costumery that suggests everything we are not at this hour. There may be no reason than that of tradition for us to associate flowered fashion in the adoption of Japanese clothes. Once upon a time whatever came from the Little Kingdom was eagerly seized as having artistic merit of the highest order, but times and thoughts have changed. Japanese art has been so cheaply commercialized throughout America, and its little shops outline the boardwalks of the pleasure resorts in such a prolific manner, that we prefer to go to China—the vast spaces around the Great Wall—for suggestions.

The greater designers in Paris have preferred China to Japan for half a dozen years, and we in America have made the kimono too much a part of our early-morning life, at $2 per garment, that we may not see in this effort of the house of Cheruit an open path to beauty.

Entire Gowns of Jet

The house of Callot has thrown its influence into many channels, and the gowns of its making, which arrived in this country later than all the others, increase the respect we must pay to jet. The woman who has cherished a frock of jet and wondered if the style would ever return in order that she might revive it into something modern, may go to the work with enthusiasm.

Callot is not the only designer who whirls jet around the wheel of fashion into the top place, but she is the one designer who introduces entire gowns of it. These are coat-of-mail creations, that cling to the figure like a glittering cuirass and whiten in a brilliant way the skin of the neck and arms, which are left uncovered. These gowns have trains of tulle or lace, and they are costly—Oh! very, very costly!

To the average mind they may seem a bit heavy for an American spring, and it is safe to say that the woman who buys a costly evening gown in April of this year 1918 will expect it to do duty through the summer season. Even our glittering birds of paradise, who heretofore floated through a forest of riches showing their plumage and thinking nothing of the cares of life, have been changed heart and soul by the war and its terrors into creatures of self-sacrifice and much higher ideas.

Choosing Green for Suits.

Another thing that the house of Callot has done to get us away from a conventional fashion is the exploitation of green for the street. It may be roughly said that there are a thousand navy blue gowns to a hundred of any other color, and, admirable as dark blue is, the world grows a bit

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

HAT LINES MUST BE SMART

Designers Apparently Deduce That the More Peculiar the Brim, the Smarter the Headgear.

In the Paris shops are shown many satin hats, extremely small models that are excellent for spring wear. They have satin trimming, if they have any—for the lines of the hats are what make them smart, writes a Paris correspondent.

Two exceptionally pretty chapeaux were seen recently. One was of black milan straw with a satin brim in military blue; the only embellishment was supplied by grosgrain ribbon and black ostrich. The ribbon bow was made in tiny loops and ends, and was placed at the back of the hat, a little to the side. The ostrich was at the extreme left edge of the brim, in front.

The other model had a black lisere brim and a very high black tulle crown. The crown band which ended in a bow in the back—at the center of the back—was of French blue ribbon, finished in front with a knot of French flowers.

There are many quaint twists in the brim of hats. The designers seem to feel that the more peculiar the brim the smarter the hat. Ribbon is used extensively and oh, so many flowers. We have rose toques, violet toques and many other kinds, and this revival of French flower hats has helped to revive our flower industry and for this we are duly grateful.

for these frocks, which bore close kinship to a softer epoch than the one in which we take our part today.

It is of psychological interest, this introduction into women's apparel of a kind of costumery that suggests everything we are not at this hour. There may be no reason than that of tradition for us to associate flowered muslins, big taffeta sashes with bows at the back, immense English garden hats tied under the chin, and lace-covered parasols, with that part of woman's nature that deals in coquetry, the eternal appeal to masculine admiration, helplessness, and all the accentuated tricks of femininity which the world thought it had wiped out to a certain measure.

Yet we do connect these clothes and these traits. The world always looks upon a woman who is frocked in a figured muslin, her eyes shaded with a huge hat, her arms half bare and a rose at her belt, as one who is out for admiration.

The Leopard and His Spots.

There cannot arise a critic so foolish in these days as to suggest that the militant woman is not capable of looking like a Watteau shepherdess if she takes it into her mind to do so. Therefore, our surprise is not that the women of the moment should appear well in the English garden type of clothes, with which one always associates strawberries and cream, low voices, waving hair parted in the middle, and shy, almost gauche manners but that they should elect this flowery and futile fashion at this hour.

Yet they are doing it. Both France and America are heaping figured fabrics upon its womankind. Lace is installed again. Immense bows of taffeta ribbon, sashes of every kind flowing, elbow sleeves; surplice necks with wide handkerchiefs of colored fabrics, are shown and worn by women who have probably spent the morning at a class in nursing at a hospital and will spend the evening at a canteen.

Isn't this a curious psychological thing? Here we have preached for two years the strengthening tendency of women to dress more and more like men in the day, and either very simply or in an Amazonian fashion in the evening.

We have tried to standardize clothes foolishly, but earnestly, throughout all channels of dress. We know that one of the most important leagues of young women in America is circulating a petition, signed by its members, to the effect that they are to buy only three gowns a season, one for each division of the day, the price to be $30 apiece, and the uniforms to be of standard pattern. And yet these very girls, right on top of such an endeavor as this to conserve and economize, fling themselves into flowered volles with pink and violet taffeta sashes tied with deep bustle bows at the back, and huge hats of Milan straw heaped with flowers!

It may be that the leopard cannot change his spots, but women can certainly change her type at will. She seems to shrink and grow thin, to curve out and grow full, to stand higher or lower in her boots, and to assume at will the militant or the coquettish air. In this spring of 1918 it looks as though she were going to do all of these things at various times of the day.

weary of the monotonous procession of gowns in this color which moves to and fro from France to Alaska. We cry aloud for something else. We are like the heroine of the novel, who passionately wished for just a thread of scarlet in her costume to make her believe that there was happiness and gaiety in the world.

Callot gives us green to quiet our nerves. She gives us a chance to get away from navy blue and still remain demurely and soberly frocked.

Concealed Beauty.

Silver ribbon under the chiffon or run through embroidered eyelids in the chiffon enters into the winning scheme of certain very clever blouses, and lace or embroidery under the thin stuff is usually better looking than much embroidery of the outer veiling.

To a waist of flesh-colored georgette is added a panel front, broad shawl collar and turn-back cuffs of natural color flit lace.

feel that the more peculiar the brim the smarter the hat. Ribbon is used extensively and oh, so many flowers. We have rose toques, violet toques and many other kinds, and this revival of French flower hats has helped to revive our flower industry and for this we are duly grateful.

CAPE FOR SPRING WEAR

The reason for the popularity of capes for the coming season is readily explained by the existence of this model of pearl-gray velour with its deep scarf collar edged with heavy silk fringe.

Laundered Laces.

Dainty laces should be washed in the following way if you would keep their fresh, new look: Purchase 4 cents' worth of benzoline; this spirit is highly inflammable, so should be kept away from artificial light or fire. Take two basins and into each put a little of the benzoline. Dip the lace in one, douse it up and down, then squeeze gently and dip in the second lot of benzoline; by then all the dirt will have dropped out. Shake the lace; it will dry in a few minutes and look like new.

Pile Fabrics Still Used.

In view of the shortage of wool fabrics expected next winter, it is thought that the various pile fabrics will be very much used. Plushes and velours for coats are expected to be much in demand and, of course, fur coats for those who can afford them.

The TRAIL BLAZER
to greater Motor Car Value

From the standpoint of dollar for dollar value there's not a car made which offers more for your money than the famous Chevrolet Four-Ninety A.

Before the Chevrolet was made in Canada, good cars were all high in price.

But our mammoth production and manufacturing efficiency enables us to sell the Chevrolet Four-Ninety A at a price much lower than its value when compared with other makes of cars.

With the surplus power developed by the famous valve-in-head motor the owner of a Four-Ninety A invariably is the "trail blazer."

Standard equipment includes speedometer, electric starting and lighting, ammeter, oil indicator light equipment, one man top, demountable rims, non-skid tires on rear wheels and many features usually looked for in cars much higher in price.

COUNTY COUNCIL

Council met in the Court House on Tuesday afternoon, Warden Hicks presiding, all the members present.

A report was received from the Provincial department of Highways notifying the council that the county roads leading north from Napanee to Selby, Roblin, Erinsville and Kalar Station and so on farther north, and the road leading from Napanee through Newburgh, Camden East, Centerville, Tamworth and joining the first named road had been designated as Provincial county highways.

The action of the warden and clerk in regard to Y.M.C.A. matters were approved.

The soldier's aid commission are asking the County Council for the names of any deceased soldiers who are buried in this county. The county clerk will be pleased to receive any information.

The county council petitioned for the release of Wm. Mowers from gaol, so that he might engage in farm work.

Capt. Carey, representing the Y.M.C.A. appeared before the council on Wednesday afternoon and gave a very lucid and thorough explanation of the war work of the Y.M.C.A. in France.

The Red Cross Society

The Society is again indebted to Misses J. Vrooman, G. Wilson and F. Leonard, for handsome donations, their reward for playing at the Strand.

A box containing 156 pairs of socks and 1 sweater has been forwarded to Headquarters.

Mrs. Foster, Montreal, has kindly given the Red Cross an exquisite hand-painted jardiner, on which numbers will be sold in aid of the soldiers. The kindness is greatly appreciated.

All are urgently requested to attend the work-meeting Saturday afternoon; further supplies are greatly needed.

Maxwell Cars.

Just arrived a shipment of the 1918 Maxwell car on exhibition at the Maxwell Sales Agency, next door to Normile Grocery. This car is worthy of your inspection as it is the most improved and best up-to-date car on the market under $1500, longer wheel base, new springs.

In the Mud.

The following is a Munchausen tale in Everybody's showing the quality of the mud in Flanders at the present day. A soldier walking along a road noticed a hat, which he attempted to kick out of the mud. What was his surprise to find a head under it, and to hear a voice calling for help. When the man was extricated, he said, "I was on horseback." So together they proceeded to dig out the horse. The horse's mouth was found to be full of hay taken from a wagon which had sunk still farther down.

WONDERFUL STUFF!
LIFT OUT YOUR CORN

Apply a few drops then lift corns calluses off with fingers—
no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether a soft or between the toes, will look right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost a trifle, but is sufficient to rid you of feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon a tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no mess or smarting when applying it afterwards. If your druggist doesn't have freezone have him order it for you.

SUPPLEMENTING THE COW PASTURE.

With coarse grains at abnormally high prices the question will arise in the minds of many dairy farmers to whether or not it will pay to use concentrated feeds of any kind with dairy cows while on pasture.

Given an abundance of good pasture, experiments at Macdonald College have proved that, it will not pay to feed the average dairy cow grain. With limited pasture and a summer extremely unfavorable weather, will pay to feed milking cows something besides the pasture. If soil crop or silage is available concentrated feed is less important, but the best returns from every standpoint a combination of the two is necessary.

The prevailing practice in many districts is to depend upon pasture exclusively. For the average cow having as she does small milking capacity and usually quite a territory of rough pasture, it is questionable grain feeding will pay under present conditions. On the other hand, where farming is more intensified, with acreage in pasture and better conditions, it is absolutely necessary and it pays to supplement the grass which gets short with at least a limited amount of grain feed.

The time to commence feeding just when the cows begin or even a little before they begin to shrink because of short pasture. If feed is delayed until the cows have materially decreased in milk and flesh the result from feeding will at first be disappointing and will continue so until the cows regain normal condition. This fact explains many of the apparently poor results from extra feedings.

The amount of feed necessary depends on the cow's work, her condition, and what else she is receiving. In the average case three to five pounds of meal per day will suit. At the present time it is often a question of taking what meal may be available and mixtures are almost on the question. Oil cake meal is about as good value as anything less of it will do. It is a good producer, and is a splendid feed for sustaining and increasing body weight. ### F. F. MILLER

Local

Maxwell Dealer.

Perhaps you have observed that we seldom feature any one detail of design or construction in a Maxwell Motor Car.

There is a reason for that.

In a product where excellence is uniform, there is no opportunity—no temptation—to emphasize any one feature, to the exclusion of others.

Today there are more than 250,000 cars of this same model in use.

For five years it has been manufactured in practically its present form.

If there ever was a weak link in the chain, it was long since strengthened.

But there wasn't—from the first this proved to be a wonderfully reliable, exceptionally economical and altogether a most satisfactory automobile.

Special features are all right.

It is permissible, of course, to emphasize any advantage a car may possess over its rivals.

But in the case of this Maxwell we feel the strongest thing we can say is that it is just as good at one point as at another—good all over and all through.

In a word, featureless—a standardized, dependable motor car.

You can't go wrong when you select a Maxwell Motor Car for yours.

250,000 other careful buyers and experienced motorists endorse your judgment.

WONDERFUL STUFF!
LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS
 with a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—
 no pain.

Oh humbug! Any corn, whether nard, or between the toes, will loosen up and lift out, without a particle pain or soreness.
 This drug is called freezone and is a pound of ether discovered by a Cini-ati man.
 Ask at any drug store for a small le of freezone, which will cost but rifle, but is sufficient to rid one's of every corn or callus.
 Put a few drops directly upon any ler, aching corn or callus. Instantly soreness disappears and shortly the or callus will loosen and can be d off with the fingers.
 This drug freezone doesn't eat out the is or calluses but shrivels them without irritating the surrounding skin.
 Just think! No pain at all; no sore-or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have zone have him order it for you.

IMPLEMENTING THE COW PAS- TURE.

With coarse grains at abnormally prices the question will arise in minds of many dairy farmers as whether or not it will pay to feed concentrated feeds of any kind to y cows while on pasture.
 Even an abundance of good pasture, experiments at Macdonald Col-have proved that, it will not pay feed the average dairy cow grain.
 In limited pasture and a summer of very unfavorable weather, it pay to feed milking cows some-besides the pasture. If silage or silage is available concentrated feed is less important, but for best returns from every standing a combination of the two is necessary.
 The prevailing practice in many districts is to depend upon pasture entirely. For the average cow having she does small milking capacity usually quite a territory of good pasture, it is questionable if in feeding will pay under present conditions. On the other hand when grazing is more intensified, with less range in pasture and better cows, is absolutely necessary and it will pay to supplement the grass when it is short with at least a limited amount of grain feed.
 The time to commence feeding is when the cows begin or even a few days before they begin to shrink because of short pasture. If feed is delayed until the cows have materially wasted in milk and flesh the results in feeding will at first be disappointing and will continue so until the cows regain normal condition.
 The fact explains many of the apparently poor results from extra feeding.
 The amount of feed necessary must depend on the cow's work, her condition, and what else she is receiving.
 The average case three to five pounds of meal per day will suffice.
 At the present time it is often a case of taking what meal may be available and mixtures are almost out of question. Oil cake meal seems to be as good value as anything and of it will do. It is a good milk producer, and is a splendid feed for fattening and increasing body weight of other feeds can be combined with it to much the better, but one pound of meal per day even alone on short pastures will go a long way in tiding over a bad time.

 Is Only Thing That Helped Him.

"Well, there may be other medicines as good as Tanlac for troubles like I had, but I have never been able to find them, and if I have spent one dollar during the past nine years, trying to get well, I have spent five hundred." Edison E. Bradshaw, who made this statement, is a contracting painter and decorator and lives at 593 Jane St., Toronto.

"My appetite seemed to be fairly good," he continued, "that is, I could eat but I couldn't digest my food properly, and always suffered with indigestion after meals. Gas would form and bloat me up and press on my heart so at times I felt like I was smothering. There was a heavy feeling in the pit of my stomach like my food had lodged there in a lump. I was bilious all the time and often had headache and severe pain all through the back of my neck. I was also very nervous, couldn't rest well at night and felt tired, worn-out and unfit for work all the time.

"I lost weight all the time, and when I began taking Tanlac I was off more than twenty pounds. But I have already gotten back fifteen pounds and have just finished my fourth bottle of Tanlac. I haven't had that tight uncomfortable feeling in my stomach and chest since I began taking it, and the sourness and gas has disappeared entirely. My food seems to digest perfectly, and I can eat and feel nourished and refreshed from it. I'm not bilious any more and am feeling much stronger and better in every way. Tanlac has convinced me that it's great medicine and I take pleasure in recommending it."

It is a great satisfaction to us to notice the gradually increasing interest manifested in the Navy as a whole. As we have before remarked, it only requires the dissemination of some information regarding the Navy and its wonderful work, to arouse a deep and yet keen interest in its welfare.

Our local Belgian Relief Committee are desirous that its contributors and the public should know that there is NOT A PACIFIST IN ALL BELGIUM according to an Asso Press Dispatcher from St. Paul, Minn., dated June 11th, as follows: "Foreign delegates had their innings late today at the annual convention of the American Federation of Labour. Belgium's sacrifices, plans of rehabilitation and the earnest appreciation of America's help were presented by Lieut. Henri De Man, of the Belgian army, and Prof. Albert Van Heke, of the University of Louvain, (now alas no more,) both delegates to the convention."

"Despite America's efforts to provide food, Belgium is on the verge of starvation," Lieut. De Man said, "Three-quarters of a million Belgian workmen are idle, because they refuse to do war work for Germany. There is not a single pacifist in Belgium, because most of our people, having lived under German rule, know what loss of the war would mean." In reply, Pr. sident Gompers assured the foreign representatives that the American Government would not stop until German military forces were swept from Belgium.

The unqualified success of the two very excellent productions at the Armouries last week under the auspices of the "U.E.L." Chapter, I.O.D.E., and its committee, was crowned by another splendid performance on Monday evening, the 17th inst., when "the company" was taken to the Opera House, Deseronto; where much enthusiasm was aroused, which also added its quota to the splendid financial result attained through the three entertainments—we being very grateful for the fine support given us by the public.

On Tuesday evening an hour and a half was very profitably and pleasantly spent in the Town Hall, by listening to Mrs. Lake's informal talk; kindly given under our auspices, which proved most interesting, emphasizing many phases of conditions in England to-day which we can hardly realize here, far from the scene of activities.

Mrs. Lake's description of her perilous six weeks voyage conveyed by destroyers and two battleships was most graphic and enthralling, especially when describing the alarm and summoning of the passengers to the boats, owing to an accident, which however, proved not to be of so serious a character as to oblige turning back. The description was very illuminating regarding the difficulties of transport attendant upon the return of Canadian women and children.

Givenchy, which has just been the scene of severe fighting, is described in Lord Beaverbrook's "Canada in Flanders" as "another red milestone on Canada's road to glory." There in June, 1915, "the Canadians did all, and more than all, that was asked of them." It was there that Major T. W. Anderson, of Toronto, was first wounded. He was commander of the Third Battalion, and is now in charge of the Minneapolis Recruiting Mission. He is the son of Mr. T. O. Anderson, of Melinda street, Toronto. on that day. They took three lines of trenches and were driven back. We were supporting them, and at 9 o'clock that night we were sent in. We were fighting round a mine crater. It was more like a snowball fight with hand-grenades than anything else I can think of—the Germans on one side of the crater and our boys on the other. We were driven back after we had taken one line of trenches."

This was due to difficulties in other parts of the field that had prevented the 7th British Division from coming up in time. The battle is described by Lord Beaverbrook as "a considerable and sanguinary battle, the story of which should appeal to every Canadian heart." It was there that Pte. Smith, of Southampton, Ont., son of a Methodist minister, and not much more than nineteen, became, on his own initiative, almost the only source for the replenishment of bombs, and by one fine impulse became a hero. It is said that he was singing the trench version of "I wonder how the old folks are at home," when a mine exploded and he was buried.

"By the time he had dug himself out," says the historian, "he discovered that all his world, including his rifle, had disappeared. But his business training told him that there was an active demand for bombs. So he festooned himself with bombs from the dead and wounded bomb-throwers around him and set out, mainly on all fours, to supply that demand. He did it five times. Twice he went up to the trenches and handed over his load to the busy men. Twice, so hot was the fire, he had to lie down and toss the bombs into the trench to the men who needed them most. His clothes were shot into rags and ravelled, but he himself was untouched in all his hazardous speculations, and he explained his escape by saying: 'I kept moving.' So through all these hells the spirit of man endured and rejoiced, indomitable."

It was at Givenchy that Pte. Gledhill, eighteen years of age, of Don Miller, near Goderich, Ont., was lifted out of his trench by a German bomb, uninjured, and there picked up a rifle and fired away from his knee. He carried Frank Clock, wounded, and dragged him by a wire lasso, when he could no longer carry him, into a place of safety under a tempest of fire. It was there that brave deeds were done by the First Canadian Battalion (Ontario Regiment), the Second and Fourth Canadian Battalions, and where many brave officers and men were killed.

Motor Machine Guns.

Hamilton Fyfe writes the London Daily Mail describing the splendid gallant and useful part played by Canadian motor machine guns, which gained precious time for saving things which would have otherwise fallen into the enemy's hands. Their duty was to assist wherever the line was particularly pressed. They attacked and dispersed the German cavalry. The Canadians put their guns in the front wire till finding themselves in danger of being outflanked, then withdrew behind the wire. They suffered in the withdrawal, only one sergeant, two privates being left unwounded. A captain had his arm blown off. Some men had only twenty hours' sleep in eight days, yet the commander reported every man cheerful and full of fight. "Nothing could be more successful than the first appearance of this vastly useful unit," concludes Fyfe. "They saved many situations from developing seriously, and killed a tremendous lot of Boches. ## THRESHING IN ONTARIO

Gangs Available This Year to Relieve Situation.

A Proposed Plan of Organization—How to Overcome the Difficulties—Applications to Be Filed at Once.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE threshing gang is not an untried experiment in Ontario. In certain counties, Lambton for instance, these gangs have been employed and have proven very successful. Neither the threshermen nor the farmer in these cases care to return to the old methods of changing help with neighbors where men for the threshing gangs can be secured. The Ontario Department of Agriculture and the Ontario Trades and Labor Branch are now co-operating to make arrangements to ensure an ample supply of labor for as many threshing gangs as are likely to be organized this fall, and suggest herein methods of organizing a gang and a plan of organization.

The Difficulties—Overcome Them.

(1.) In the early part of harvest when many moves must be made and when comparatively small amounts of grain are threshed, the thresherman finds it difficult, often, to make a profit even under present methods. If he employs a gang his expenses will be much heavier. His charges therefore must be high enough so that later in the season he may regain what is lost at this time.

(2.) But at any time during the threshing season there may be considerable idleness during the frequent changes from farm to farm caused by the comparatively small amount of grain to be threshed on the average farm. By good organization this lost time may be limited to the minimum, however, by having the majority of the changes made at night.

Thresher Board Men.

(3.) If the farmer were obliged to board the gang a certain element of unfairness could not be avoided. It would seem, therefore, that the thresher should be responsible for this. The most convenient way in Ontario, perhaps, would be for the thresher to make arrangements with each farmer to provide meals for the men, the thresher to pay for the same.

(4.) It would seem necessary for each thresher to provide a sleeping van for his gang and the men to provide blankets, as is done in the Northwest. These vans are home-made and one can be constructed for the average Ontario gang for about $100. If the thresher does his own building. Nothing ornate is required. A structure 10 feet wide by 12 feet long, built on trucks, wind-proof and rain-proof and with two tiers of bunks on each side would afford ample sleeping accommodation for an Ontario gang.

(5.) As several men constitute a gang the weekly wage sheet would run fairly high. This would involve a considerable regular expenditure on the part of the thresher, which in turn would necessitate prompt payment by farmers. Where gangs are employed it is necessary for farmers

FIGHT FOR LIFE IN SUNK U-BOAT

London, June 17.—(Via Re Limited.)—Harrowing details of destruction of one of the largest more recently constructed German submarines are given in a despatch a neutral correspondent. This marine was one of the last to Zeelbrugge before the entrance to harbor was blocked by British on April 24.

The U-boat struck a mine, and of the crew of forty only two lived on reaching the surface a terrible struggle with death for hour and a half twenty fathom low the surface. Some of the committed suicide, having lost hope of leaving the boat alive.

The only chance of escaping was force open the conning tower and forward hatches and trust to compression of air in one part of vessel to force each man like a pedo to the surface. The air pressure in the submarine had become so that the great majority of the mans could not keep their n closed.

The compressed air shot the surface, and hardly had reached the sea level when the pressure burst their lungs, and twenty of them sank like stone survivors described the yells o men, when the end came, as the horrible noise they had ever he built on trucks, wind-proof and rain-proof and with two tiers of bunks on each side would afford ample sleeping accommodation for an Ontario gang.

(5.) As several men constitute a gang the weekly wage sheet would run fairly high. This would involve a considerable regular expenditure on the part of the thrasher, which in turn would necessitate prompt payment by farmers. Where gangs are employed it is necessary for farmers to give cash or 30-day notes immediately the job is done.

(6.) Probably the most important factor of all is the rates which the thrasher will charge. These must, of course, be much higher than those charged formerly. This would make the threshing bill a fairly large sum. Yet the farmer could still make a profit by the transaction. If, by employing a gang, he were enabled in the two weeks thus saved to prepare an additional 10 acres, say for wheat, he would have from 250 to 350 extra bushels of this crop to sell in 1919.

Size of the Gangs.

(7.) The last problem is that of securing men. The average gang would probably consist of eight men as follows: Engineer, blower man, feeder, grainman and four mow or stackmen. This would leave the farmer to take care of his straw and to supply another man to carry grain if one were not sufficient. A team of his horses would also be required to draw water. He would supply fuel, of course, as is now done.

In organizing a gang of this nature possibly not more than two or three could be secured in the locality where it was desired to operate. The Ontario Trades and Labor Branch will undertake to supply as many men as can be secured for this purpose. It is thought there will be no insuperable difficulty in securing sufficient men for this purpose at reasonable wages during the threshing months.

Where the silos are to be filled the same gangs, or as many men as are required, may be utilized for this purpose.

Organize a Gang in Your District.

It is suggested that farmers' clubs, other farmers' organizations, or groups of farmers without definite organization, consider at once the advisability of employing a threshing gang this fall. Call the local thrasher to the meeting and confer with him regarding ways and means. Then, having reached a definite agreement, write Dr. W. A. Riddell, Superintendent Ontario Trades and Labor Branch, 15 Queen's Park, Toronto.

Inversely any thrasher who wishes to organize a gang should write Dr. Riddell also. In every case it will be necessary for a thorough understanding to exist between the thrasher and his patrons. When such is the case everything possible will be done to supply sufficient men for all threshing gangs required this year in Ontario. Apply to Dr. W. A. Riddell not later than July 10th.—Justus Miller, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture.

Noted Cricketer Enlists.

Bert Kortland, an International sportsman, has enlisted voluntarily in the 6th Canadian Field Engineers, in training near Vancouver. Kortland, in the years of 1909 and 1910 was, according to the averages, the leading Australian cricket batsman. He is known in sporting circles throughout Canada and the United States and England, as well as in Australia.

New Arctic Station.

A new Arctic meteorological station equipped with a wireless outfit has been established at the mouth of the Yenesei, and is sending out daily reports to stations to the south of it.

The Arctic tribes of Northern (Gulf) has superstition woven into very fabric of his nature. If he killed a bear with a rifle, he must kill a deer with it. He will not implement if a woman has stepped over it. A dead whale or seal, when brought ashore, must have a drink. If he moves into a house by the door he must go out by the skylight. A child has died, the father stands guard around the igloo with a sacrificial knife, to keep evil spirits away. will not drive nails at that time. he wants work done, another Eskimo will do it for him. After the birth of an infant, the female has her clothes made for herself and child of caribou skin. She builds snow igloo and goes into it alone to bear her infant. Few have been known to die at this time. A mother stays in the igloo for a month; no one is allowed to go near her. After the expiration of a month, all the bedding and clothing she has used are buried under stones.

Conjurors and medicine men give advice and cast out evil spirits. They are paid in skins, rifles, or any other article which comes in daily among these people. Some of the "swells" of the tribe wear a belt with decorations of sealskin, ribbons, different colors and little dolls made of ivory attached. There is a goddess of the sea and a goddess of the land, both very large and very strong.

When a member of a tribe dies only the next of kin will attend funeral services. When they bury in winter, they take the body or sled, conveying it to a small island or promontory. Here they build a grave of rocks and place therein the body. Just before covering, the face around the body is cut. All effects of the deceased are left at the grave, and often presents are brought. They mourn for a month and the nearest relatives abstain from meat and other specified articles of food during that time.—The Chian Herald.

Coal in Ontario.

What may be a coal mine has been discovered by men constructing Queenston Hydro Power Canal near Niagara Falls. Very deep excavations are necessary to construct the canal, and the coal deposit struck at a depth of about 170 feet near the whirlpool. The coal is of rough variety, what is called rough coal, but it is inflammable. Engineers say if there are any quantities of it there it may prove a rich find for the province. The Hydro engineers think this coal deposit came from a buried forest perhaps in the glacier period when much of the land in this end of Ontario was materially changed. An experiment work will be carried out likely to ascertain just how large this coal deposit is and whether it is worth working. The Hydro engineers are coming across much rock, quicksand in building the power canal. Many farms along the route are being purchased by the Hydro Farms Department, though what to be done with them is not given. It is said, however, that there is a lot of factory sites between Whirlpool and Queenston when the canal is finished.

GIRLS! LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER

How to make a creamy beauty lotion for a few cents.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands.

FIGHT FOR LIFE IN SUNK U-BOAT.

London, June 17.—(Via Reuter's Limited).—Harrowing details of the destruction of one of the largest and more recently constructed German submarines are given in a despatch from a neutral correspondent. This submarine was one of the last to leave Zeebrugge before the entrance to the harbor was blocked by British forces on April 24.

The U-boat struck a mine, and out of the crew of forty only two survived on reaching the surface after a terrible struggle with death for an hour and a half twenty fathoms below the surface. Some of the crew committed suicide, having lost all hope of leaving the boat alive.

The only chance of escaping was to force open the conning tower and the forward hatches and trust to the compression of air in one part of the vessel to force each man like a torpedo to the surface. The air pressure in the submarine had become so high that the great majority of the Germans could not keep their mouths closed.

The compressed air shot them to the surface, and hardly had they reached the sea level when the air pressure burst their lungs, and about twenty of them sank like stones. The survivors described the yells of the men, when the end came, as the most horrible noise they had ever heard.

The attention of a British trawler was attracted and it hastened to the rescue. The condition of the survivors showed that there experiences in the submarine had been of a dreadful character.

ORCHARD COVER CROPS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The main uses of the cover crop in the orchard are: to hold the snow in winter, and thus afford greater protection to the roots of trees; to prevent the thawing and freezing of the ground; to lessen the depth to which the frost will go in the soil; to furnish vegetable matter in the spring for the purpose of obtaining humus and nitrogen; and to act as a catch-crop in autumn to prevent the leaching of plant food made available during the summer. The cover crop is also a means of reducing the moisture in the soil by transpiration, and thus aids in ripening the wood of fruit trees liable to be injured. Where the soil has been long cultivated, and needs additional plant food, especially nitrogen, leguminous plants, such as clovers and vetches which will take free nitrogen from the air, and thus add a large quantity of this useful and expensive fertilizer to the soil at slight cost, are usually best; while where the soil has not been long under cultivation and is well supplied with humus and nitrogen, a non-leguminous plant such as rape or buckwheat may be better, as the holding of snow and the protection of the roots of the trees are then more important than adding fertility to the soil, especially where the snow-fall is light.

In the colder parts of Canada, where there is usually plenty of moisture in summer, it is better to sow seed for the cover crop in the first half of July or even in late June, rather than in the second half of July, as it is important to have the wood of trees thoroughly ripened before winter sets in, and by sowing the seed early the growth of the tree should be aided in ripening by the drying of the soil caused by the transpiration of moisture from the growing cover crop. In the dryer and milder parts of Canada it is not necessary to sow seed for the cover crop until about the middle of July, as the early ripening of the wood is not so important as the conserving of moisture in the soil by cultivation through the early part of the summer. No nurse crop is, as a rule, necessary. Some of the desirable characteristics of a good plant for cover crops are, first that it will germinate quickly and grow rapidly, so that weeds will be checked. It should be a strong grower, as there should be a dense cover to prevent the frost from penetrating deeply into the ground. It should stand fairly erect, so that it will hold the snow well in winter. It should also be a plant which can be easily handled in the orchard. In districts where there is danger of making the soil too dry by late growth, a cover crop should be chosen which will be killed by early frost, such as buckwheat. Some of the best plants for cover crops are: Mammoth Red Clover, Common Red Clover, Crimson Clover, Hairy Vetch, Summer Vetch, Buckwheat and Rape. The last has been found very useful on the Prairies for holding snow. Where weeds are not liable to spread into adjacent areas and cause extra labour they make a fair cover crop if allowed to grow up after the end of June.

"Traction"—The Aristocrat

¶ Keep tab on the autos passing you with "Traction" equipment. Almost without exception you find "The Master Tire" on cars whose owners take pride in their possession. "Traction" is so aristocratic-looking that instinctively one feels it is always the right tire for the car he has or the car he is going to get.

¶ It is almost certain if a motorist is not using "Traction" that he prefers an anti-skid at a lower price like Dunlop "Special," or a smooth tread like "Dunlop Plain."

¶ The Dunlop Line gives you an excellent opportunity to select the tire you want—at a just price.

BIG TIMBER

Copyright, 1916, by Little, Brown & Co.

"Ah!" said he. An expression of well-ed surprise flashed across his face. "Another potential romance strangled at birth. You know, I hoped you were some local maiden before whom I could pose as a heroic rescuer. Such is life. Odd too. Linda Abbey—I'm the Monohan tail to the Abbey business kite, you see—impressed me as pilot for a spin this afternoon and backed out at the last moment. I think she smelled this blow. So I went out for a ride by myself. I was glowering at that new house through a glass when I spied you out in the thick of it."

He had the clutch in now, and the launch was cleaving the seas, even at half speed throwing out wide wings of spray. Some of this the wind brought across the cockpit. "Come up into this seat," Monohan commanded. "I don't suppose you can get any wetter, but if you put your feet through this bulkhead door the heat from the engine will warm you. By Jove, you're fairly shivering."

"It's lucky for me you happened along," Stella remarked when she was ensconced behind the bulkhead. "I was getting so cold. I don't know how much longer I could have stood it."

"Thank the good glasses that picked you out. You were only a speck on the water, you know, when I sighted you first."

He kept silent after that. All his faculties were centered on the seas ahead which rolled up before the sharp cutwater of the launch. He was making time and still trying to avoid boarding seas. When a big one lifted ahead he slowed down. He kept one hand on the throttle control, whistling under his breath disconnected snatches of song. Stella studied his profile, clean cut as a cameo and wholly pleasing. He was almost as big bodied as Jack Fyfe and full four inches taller. The wet shirt clinging close to his body outlined well knit shoulders, rosy muscled arms. He could easily have posed for a viking, so strikingly blond was he, with fair, curly hair. She judged that he might be around thirty, yet his face was altogether boyish.

While Stella sat there, drawn faced with the cold, the launch slipped into the quiet nook of Cougar bay and slowed down to the float.

Monohan helped her out, threw off the canoe's painter and climbed back into the launch.

"You're as wet as I am," Stella said. "Won't you come up to the house and get a change of clothes? I haven't even thanked you."

and given up because it soared above her vocal range. Stella rose to put up the music. Without any premeditated idea of playing, she sat down at the piano and began to run over the accompaniment. She could play passably.

"That doesn't seem so very hard," she thought aloud. Benton turned at sound of her words.

"Say, did you never get any part of your voice back, Stella?" he asked. "I never hear you try to sing."

"No," she answered. "I tried and tried long after you left home, but it was always the same old story. I haven't sung a note in five years."

"Linda fell down hard on that song last night," he went on. "There was a time when that wouldn't have been a starter for you, eh? Did you know Stella used to warble like a prima donna, Jack?"

Fyfe shook his head.

"Fact. The governor spent a pot of money cultivating her voice. It was some voice too. She"—

He broke off to listen. Stella was humming the words of the song, her fingers picking at the melody instead of the accompaniment.

"Why, you can!" Benton cried.

"Can what?" She turned on the stool.

"Sing, of course. You got that high trill that Linda had to screech through. You got it perfectly without effort."

"I didn't," she returned. "Why, I wasn't singing; just humming it over."

"You let out a link or two on those high notes just the same, whether you knew you were doing it or not," her brother returned impatiently. "Go on. Turn yourself loose. Sing that song."

"Oh, I couldn't," Stella said ruefully. "I haven't tried for so long. It's no use. My voice always cracks, and I want to cry."

"Crack fiddlesticks!" Benton retorted. "I know what it used to be. Believe me, it sounded natural, even if you were just liting. Here."

He came over to the piano and playfully edged her off the stool.

"I'm pretty rusty," he said, "but I can fake what I can't play of this. It's simple enough. You stand up there and sing."

She only stood looking at him.

"Go on," he commanded. "I believe you can sing anything. You have to show me if you can't."

Stella fingered the sheets reluctantly; then she drew a deep breath and began.

It was not a difficult selection, mere-trumpet—it did! It was too big for the room. She felt herself caught up in a triumphant ecstasy as she sang. She found herself blinking as the last note died away. Her brother twisted about on the piano stool, fumbling for a cigarette.

"And still they say they can't come back," he remarked at last. "Why, you're better than you ever were. Stella. You've got the old sweetness and flexibility that dad used to rave about, but your voice is bigger, somehow different. It gets under a man's skin."

She picked up the baby from the floor, began to play with him. She didn't want to talk. She wanted to think, to gloat over and hug to herself this miracle of her restored voice. She was very quiet, very much absorbed in her own reflections until it was time, very shortly, to put Jack junior in his bed. That was a function she made wholly her own. The nurse might greet his waking whimper in the morning and minister to his wants throughout the day, but Stella "tucked him in" his crib every night. And after the blue eyes were closed she sat there very still, thinking. In a detached way she was conscious of hearing Charlie leave.

Later, when she was sitting beside her dressing table brushing her hair, Fyfe came in. He perched himself on the foot rail of the bed, looking silently at her. She had long grown used to that. It was a familiar trick of his.

"How did it happen that you've never tried your voice lately?" he asked after a time.

"I gave it up long ago," she said. "Didn't I ever tell you that I used to sing and lost my voice?"

"No," he answered. "Charlie did just now. You rather took my breath away. It's wonderful. You'd be a sensation in opera."

"I might have been," she corrected. "That was one of my little dreams. You don't know what a grief it was to me when I got over that throat trouble and found I couldn't sing. I used to try and try, and my voice would break every time. I lost all heart to try after awhile. That was when I wanted to take up nursing, and they wouldn't let me. I haven't thought about singing for an age. I've crooned lullabies to Jacky without remembering that I once had volume enough to drown out an accompanist. Dad was awfully proud of my voice."

"You've reason to be proud of it now," Fyfe said slowly. "It's a voice in ten thousand. What are you going to do with it?"

"Nothing," she said, a trifle tartly. "How can I? Granting that my voice is worth the trouble, would you like me to go and study in the east or abroad? Would you be willing to bear the expense of such an undertaking? To have me leave Jack to nursemaids and you to your logs?"

"So that in the fullness of time I might secure a little reflected glory as the husband of Mme. Fyfe, the famous soprano," he replied slowly. "Well, I can't say that's a particularly pleasing prospect."

"Then why ask me what I'm going to do with it?" she flung back impatiently. "It'll be an asset—like my looks—and—and—"

She dropped her face in her hands, choking back an involuntary sob. Fyfe crossed the room at a bound and put his arms around her.

"Stella, Stella!" he cried sharply. "Don't be a fool."

"D—don't be cross, Jack," she whis-

A CRIPPLE FOR THREE YEARS

Helpless in Bed With Rheumatism Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. ALEXANDER MUNRO

R.R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont

"For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. During that time, I had treatment from a number of doctors, and tried nearly everything I saw advertised to cure Rheumatism, without receiving any benefit.

Finally, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. Before I had used half a box I noticed an improvement; the pain was not so severe, and the swelling started to go down.

I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

tenderly the glossy brown hair flowed about her shoulders.

"Try it, Stella," he whispered passionately. "Try wanting to like me; a change. I can't make love by myself. Shake off that infernal apathy that taking possession of you where I concerned. If you can't love me, God's sake fight with me! Do something!"

Looking back at that evening as a summer wore on Stella perceived that it was the starting point of many things, no one of them definitely standing by itself, but bulking large a whole. Fyfe made his appeal, and left her unmoved save in certain sup-might be around thirty, yet his face was altogether boyish.

While Stella sat there, drawn faced with the cold, the launch slipped into the quiet nook of Cougar bay and slowed down to the float.

Monohan helped her out, threw off the canoe's painter and climbed back into the launch.

"You're as wet as I am," Stella said. "Won't you come up to the house and get a change of clothes? I haven't even thanked you."

"Nothing to be thanked for," he smiled up at her. "Only please remember not to get offshore in a canoe again. I mightn't be handy the next time, and Roaring lake's fickle as your charming sex—all smiles one minute, storming the next. No, I won't stay this time, thanks. A little wet won't hurt me. I wasn't in the water long enough to get chilled, you know. I'll be home in half an hour. Run along and get dressed, Mrs. Fyfe, and drink something hot to drive that chill away. Goodby."

Stella went up to the house, her hand tingling with his parting grip. Over and above the peril she had escaped rose an uneasy vision of a greater peril to her peace of mind. The platitudes of soul affinity, of irresistible magnetic attraction, of love that leaped full blown into reality at the touch of a hand or the glance of an eye, she had always viewed with distrust, holding them the weaknesses of weak, volatile natures. But there was something about this man which had stirred her, nothing that he said or did, merely some elusive, personal attribute. She had never undergone any such experience, and she puzzled over it now. A chance stranger, and his touch could make her pulse leap. It filled her with astonished dismay.

Afterward, dry clad and warm, sitting in her pet chair, Jack junior cooing at her from a nest among cushions on the floor, the natural reaction set in, and she laughed at herself. When Fyfe came home she told him lightly of her rescue.

He said nothing at first, only sat drumming on his chair arm, his eyes steady on her.

"That might have cost you your life," he said at last. "Will you remember not to drift offshore again?"

"I rather think I shall," she responded. "It wasn't a pleasant experience." "Monohan, eh?" he remarked after another interval. "So he's on Roaring lake again."

"Do you know him?" she asked. "Yes," he replied briefly.

For a minute or so longer he sat there, his face wearing its habitual impassiveness; then he got up, kissed her with a queer sort of intensity and went out. Stella gazed after him, mildly surprised. It wasn't quite in his usual manner.

CHAPTER X. A Resurrection.

IT might have been a week or so later that Stella made a discovery which profoundly affected the whole current of her thought. The long twilight was just beginning. She was curled on the living room floor, playing with the baby. Fyfe and Charlie Benton sat by a window, smoking, conversing, as they frequently did, upon certain phases of the timber industry. A draft from an open window fluttered some sheet music down off the piano rack, and Stella rescued it from Jack junior's tiny, clawing hands. Some of the Abbys had been there the evening before. One bit of music was a song Linda had tried to sing fully edged her off the stool.

"I'm pretty rusty," he said, "but I can fake what I can't play of this. It's simple enough. You stand up there and sing."

She only stood looking at him.

"Go on," he commanded. "I believe you can sing anything. You have to show me if you can't."

Stella fingered the sheets reluctantly; then she drew a deep breath and began.

It was not a difficult selection, merely a bit from a current light opera, with a closing passage that ranged a trifle too high for the ordinary untrained voice to take with ease. Stella sang it effortlessly, the last high, trilling notes pouring out as sweet and clear as the carol of a lark. Benton struck the closing chord and looked up at her. Fyfe leaned forward in his chair. Jack junior, among the pillows on the floor, waved his arms, kicking and gurgling.

"You did pretty well on that," Charlie remarked complacently. "Now sing something. Got any of your old pieces?"

"I wonder if I could?" Stella murmured. "I'm almost afraid to try."

She hurried away to some outlying part of the house, reappearing in a few minutes with a dog eared bundle of sheets in her hand. From among these she selected three and set them on the rack.

Benton whistled when he glanced over the music.

"The Siren Song," he grunted. "What is it—something new? Lord, look at the scale! Looks like one of those screaming arias from the 'Flying Dutchman.' Some stunt!"

"Marchand composed it for the express purpose of trying out voices," Stella said. "It is a stunt."

"You'll have to play your own accompaniment," Charlie grinned. "That's too much for me."

"Oh, just so you give me a little support here and there," Stella told him. "I can't sing sitting on a piano stool."

She Felt Herself Caught Up In a Triumphant Ecstasy as She Sang.

Benton made a face at the music and struck the keys.

It seemed to Stella nothing short of a miracle. She had been mute so long. She had almost forgotten what a tragedy losing her voice had been. And to find it again, to hear it ring like a can't say that's a particularly pleasing prospect."

"Then why ask me what I'm going to do with it?" she flung back impatiently. "It'll be an asset—like my looks—and—and—"

She dropped her face in her hands, choking back an involuntary sob. Fyfe crossed the room at a bound and put his arms around her.

"Stella, Stella!" he cried sharply. "Don't be a fool."

"D—don't be cross, Jack," she whispered. "Please, I'm sorry. I simply can't help it. You don't understand."

"Oh, don't I?" he said savagely. "I understand too well; that's the devil of it. But I suppose that's a woman's way—to feed her soul with illusions and let the realities go hang. Look here."

He caught her by the shoulders and pulled her to her feet, facing him. There was a fire in his eye, a hard shutting together of his lips that frightened her a little.

"Look here," he said roughly. "Take a brace, Stella. Do you realize what sort of a state of mind you're drifting into? You married me under more or less compulsion—compulsion of circumstances—and gradually you're beginning to get dissatisfied, to pity yourself. You'll precipitate things you maybe don't dream of now if you keep on. Hang it, I didn't create the circumstances! I only showed you a way out. You took it. It satisfied you for awhile; you can't deny it did. But it doesn't any more. You're nursing a lot of illusions, Stella, that are going to make your life full of misery."

"I'm not," she sobbed. "It's because I haven't any illusions that—that—Oh, what's the use of talking, Jack? I'm not complaining. I don't even know what gave me this black mood just now. I suppose that queer miracle of my voice coming back upset me. I feel—well, as if I were a different person, somehow—as if I had forfeited any right to have it. Oh, it's silly, you'll say. But it's there. I can't help my feeling—or my lack of it."

Fyfe's face whitened a little. His hands dropped from her shoulders.

"Now you're talking to the point," he said quietly. "Especially that last. We've been married some little time now, and, if anything, we're farther apart in the essentials of mating than we were at the beginning. You've committed yourself to an undertaking, yet more and more you encourage yourself to wish for the moon. If you don't stop dreaming and try real living, don't you see a lot of trouble ahead for yourself? It's simple. You're slowly hardening yourself against me, beginning to resent my being a factor in your life. It's only a matter of time if you keep on until your emotions center about some other man."

"Why do you talk like that?" she said bitterly. "Do you think I've got neither pride nor self respect?"

"Yes. Both a-plenty," he answered. "But you're a woman, with a rather complex nature even for your sex. If your heart and your head ever clash over anything like that you'll be in perfect hell until one or the other gets the upper hand. You're a thoroughbred and high strung as thoroughbreds are. It takes something besides three meals a day and plenty of good clothes to complete your existence. If I can't make it complete some other man will make you think he can. Why don't you try? Haven't I got any possibilities as a lover? Can't you throw a little halo of romance about me for your own sake—if not for mine?"

He drew her up close to him, stroking

"Try it, Stella," he whispered passionately.

ficial aspects. She was sorry, but was mostly sorry for herself. And denied his premonition of disaster.

She never dreamed that Jack Fyfe could possibly have foreseen in W. Monohan a dangerous factor in his lives. A man is not supposed to have uncanny intuitions, even when his wife is a wonderfully attractive woman who does not care for him except in a friendly sort of way. Stella herself had a ple warning. From the first time meeting the man's presence affected strangely, made an appeal to her that no man had ever made.

There was no denying the man's personal charm in the ordinary sense of the word. He was virile, handsomely cultured, just such a man as she could easily have centered her heart upon times past—just such a man as can a woman's heart thrilling when lays siege to her. If he had made open bid for Stella's affection she, trenched behind all the accepted conventions of her upbringing, would have coiled from him, viewed him with wholly distrustful eyes.

But he did nothing of the sort. He was a friend, or at least he became. Inevitably they were thrown much together. There was a continual informal running back and forth between Fyfe's place and Abbey's. Monohan was a lily of the field, although it was common knowledge on Roaring lake that he was a heavy stockholder in Abbey-Monohan combination. At the rate, he was holidaying on the island that summer. There had grown up a genuine intimacy between Linda and Stella. There were always people at the Abbys', sometimes a few guests at the Fyfe bungalow. Stella's melodious voice served to heighten popularity. The net result of it was that in the following three months scarce three days went by that she not converse with Monohan.

She could not help making comparisons between the two men. They stood out in marked contrast, in manner, physique, in everything. While Fyfe was reserved almost to taciturnity, impassive featured, save for a whimsical gleam that was never w

Monohan talked with facile ease, with wonderful expressiveness of face. He was a finished product of courteous generations. Moreover, he had been everywhere, done a little of everything, acquired in his manner something of the versatility of his experience. Physi-

She knew beyond peradventure that so too had Jack Fyfe, she reminded make a flush glow in her cheeks, while Monohan could do that. He did not net need to be actively attentive. It was only necessary for him to be near.

CHAPTER XI.

The Crisis.

IT dawned upon Stella Fyfe in the fullness of the season, when the first cool October days were upon them, and the lake shores flamed again with the red and yellow and umber of autumn, that she had been playing with fire and that fire burns.

This did not filter into her consciousness by degrees. She had steeled herself to seeing him pass away with the rest of the summer folk, to take himself out of her life. She admitted that there would be a gap. But that had to be. No word other than friendly ones would ever pass between them.
He would go away, and she would go on as before. That was all. She was scarcely aware how far they had traveled along that road whereon travelers converse by glance of eye, by subtle intuitions, eloquent silences. Monohan himself delivered the shock that awakened her to despairing clearness of vision.

He had come to bring her a book, he and Linda Abbey and Charlie together, a commonplace enough little courtesy. And it happened that this day Fyfe had taken his rifle and vanished into the woods immediately after luncheon. Between Linda Abbey and Charlie Benton matters had so far progressed that it was now the most natural thing for them to seek a corner or poke along the beach together, oblivious to all but themselves. This afternoon they chatted awhile with Stella and then gradually detached themselves until Monohan, glancing through the window, pointed them out to his hostess. They were seated on a log at the edge of the lawn, a stone's throw from the house.

"They're getting on," he said. "Lucky beggars. It's all plain sailing for them."

There was a note of infinite regret in his voice, a sadness that stabbed Stella Fyfe like a lance. She did not dare look at him. Something rose chokingly in her throat. She felt and fought against a slow welling of tears to her eyes. Before she sensed that she was betraying herself Monohan was holding both her hands fast between his own, gripping them with a fierce, insistent pressure, speaking in a passionate undertone.

"Why should we have to beat our heads against a stone wall like this?"
he was saying wildly. "Why couldn't we have met and loved and been happy, as we could have been? It was fated to happen. I felt it that day I dragged you out of the lake. It's been to go my road and leave you to yours.

Oh, the blank hopelessness of it, the useless misery of it. We're made for each other, and we have to grin and say goodbye, go along our separate ways trying to smile. What a devilish state of affairs! But I love you, dear, and no matter—I—ah—"

His voice flattened out. His hands released hers. He straightened quickly. Stella turned her head. Jack Fyfe stood in the doorway. His face was fixed in its habitual mask. He was biting the end off a cigar. He struck a match and put it to the cigar end with steady fingers as he walked slowly across the big room.

"I hear the kid peeping," he said to Stella quite casually, "and I noticed Martha outside as I came in. Better go see what's up with him."

Trained to repression, schooled in self control, Stella rose to obey, for under the smoothness of his tone there was the iron edge of command. Her heart apparently ceased to beat. She tried to smile, but she knew that her face was tear wet. She knew that Jack Fyfe had seen and understood. She had done no wrong, but a terrible apprehension of consequences seized her,
a fear that tragedy of her own making might stalk grimly in that room.

Sitting beside a window, chin in hand,
her lower lip compressed between her

Then, moved by an impulse she did not attempt to define, a mixture of motives, pity for him, a craving for the outlet of words, a desire to set herself right before him, she slipped on a dressing robe and crossed the hall. The door swung open noiselessly. Fyfe sat slumped in a chair, hat pulled low on his forehead, hands thrust deep in his pockets. He did not even look up. His eyes stared straight ahead, absent, unseeing fixed on nothing. He seemed to be unconscious of her presence or to ignore it, she could not tell which.

"Jack," she said. And when he made no response she said again tremulously, that unyielding silence chilling her,
"Jack!"

He stirred a little, but only to take off his hat and lay it on a table beside him. With one hand pushing back mechanically the straight, reddish tinged hair from his brow, he looked up at her and said briefly in a tone barren of all emotion:

"Well?"

She was suddenly dumb. Words failed her utterly. Yet there was much to be said, much that was needful to say. They could not go on with a cloud like that over them, a cloud that had to be dissipated in the crucible of words. Yet she could not begin. Fyfe, after a prolonged silence, seemed to grasp her difficulty. Abruptly he began to speak cutting straight to the

BARRIER CHECKS INSECT ATTACKS

Bands Prevent Caterpillars, Cutworms and Other Pests From Attacking Trees.

STRIPS OF COTTON BATTING

Sticky Substance Must Be Renewed From Time to Time—Fly Paper is Sometimes Used—Other Materials Mentioned.

Bands of sticky material, 4 to 5 inches wide, applied around tree trunks sometimes may be used to advantage to prevent caterpillars, climbing cutworms, and certain other insects from climbing trees. These bands are also employed to prevent nonflying and wingless moths, such as the gipsy moth, cankerworm moths, tussock moths, etc., from ascending trees to deposit their eggs. Cotton batting and wire screen also are used in making protective bands.

daily by hand. This device, however, does not prevent the ascent of trees by any young larvae hatched from eggs deposited by the captured moths below the barrier, and hence the sticky bands are more effective.

DAIRY

SKIMMED MILK IS VALUABLE

Little Richer in Protein Than Whole Milk, but Lower in Carbohydrates—Feeding Calves.

Skimmed milk is a little richer in protein than whole milk, but lower in carbohydrates. Since most of the fat has been removed in the cream the skimmed milk will need carbohydrates to make it a balanced ration for calves.

A good plan is to replace a portion of the whole milk with skimmed milk, gradually increase the skimmed milk with some form of carbohydrates till all of the whole milk is replaced by skimmed milk. Fine ground meal is one of the best carbohydrate supplements to be fed with skimmed milk. Some feeders cook the meal, stir it in

The "bolero" effect is so decidedly lasty when in the proper cloth it is surprising that it has not been popular for many seasons. Corduroy is only cloth for a bolero, and as shown it makes up wonderfully. bolero is one of the outstanding fures of Spanish dress, and it is due become popular with American ladies before the end of the summer months. #### Resin-Castor Oil Mixture.

This may be made according to the following formula:

Resin .....pounds.. 5
Castor oil .....pints.. 2

Place the resin and castor oil in a pot and heat slowly until the resin is melted. Add more oil if too thick.

These sticky bands are sometimes injurious to the tree, but injury may be avoided by spreading the adhesive on a strip of heavy paper encircling the tree trunk. A form of band that has given satisfactory results is made from cheap cotton batting and single-ply tarred building paper. The cotton should be cut into strips about 2 inches wide and wrapped around the tree trunk so as to fill all the crevices of the bark. Over the cotton is placed a strip of tarred paper about 5 inches wide, drawn tightly and securely tacked where it overlaps. The sticky material is then spread on top of the paper.

The sticky substance must be renewed from time to time, since when it dries out or becomes covered with dust or insects it falls as a barrier to crawling insects. If a combing instrument is occasionally drawn over the band it will serve to lengthen its usefulness by bringing some of the sticky portion to the surface.

Sticky fly paper is used sometimes in place of the sticky bands. This may be attached to the trunk by means of heavy twine tied tightly around the upper and lower edges, and properly should be put over a strip of cotton as described above.

New Tree-Banding Material.

The material described below, applied as a band around the trunk of trees, has been reported as a satisfactory barrier in preventing the ascent of caterpillars.

Materials for Making.

The substances used for making this tree-banding material are: (1) Soft coal-tar pitch; (2) high-boiling neutral coal-tar oil (density about 1.15 at 68 degrees F.); (3) rosin oil (first run "kidney" oil); and (4) stone lime.

Method of Making.

The method of making may be divided into two parts:

Part I. Stock Mixture.

Place a weighed amount of the coal-tar pitch in a suitable cooking vessel

Part II. Finished Product.

a. Stock mixture (pitch-neutral coal tar oil) .....pounds.. 5
b. Neutral coal-tar oil .....do.... 16
c. Slaked lime .....do.... 4
d. Rosin oil .....do.... 20
e. Neutral coal-tar oil .....do.... 16

Place materials a, b, and c in a mixing vessel and stir until of a uniform consistency. Next add the rosin oil and work in for ten minutes, finally adding the additional ten pounds of neutral coal-tar oil. Agitate the mixture thoroughly for 20 to 30 minutes and then transfer it to the storage container and allow it to stand two or three days, or until it becomes a semi-solid cake. Then stir in two pounds of neutral coal-tar oil to each 50 pounds of the mixture in order to give it the desired oily surface. If too soft, add more rosin oil and lime; if too hard, use more neutral coal-tar oil.

This material should be applied on tarred paper strips over cotton bands. Axle Grease, Fish Oil, and Rosin Banding Material.

A tree-banding material used in Europe, reported as effective, is made as follows:

Axle grease .....pound.. 1
Fish oil .....pint.. 1
Powdered rosin .....pounds.. 2

Heat the axle grease, to remove all of the water contained therein, in a cooking vessel having a capacity of at least one gallon. Then stir in the fish oil and finally the powdered rosin a little at a time. When the latter is dissolved, remove from the fire and the mixture is ready for use the next day. Apply to tarred paper bands as already described.

Several other sticky substances, home-made and proprietary, are used. Printer's Ink.

Printer's ink usually consists of refuse ink and is sold as "tree ink," and should be mixed with a heavy oil to prevent its drying out too quickly. Apply as described for the new tree-banding material.

The indiscriminate use of these bands, as well as mechanical barriers, is to be discouraged. Their use in parks is sometimes noted on trees which are not subject to attack by insects against which they would have value. As a rule, it is advisable to obtain advice as to their use from entomologists.

Barriers, other than sticky bands, are sometimes used to prevent insects from crawling up trees.

Cotton Batting.

Bands of cotton batting about 6 to 8 inches wide are effective as long as the cotton remains fluffy. Wrap the band around the tree trunk and securely tie the bottom edge by means of stout twine. The upper edge should then be turned down over the string, forming a flange of loose cotton all around the tree.

Wire Screen.

Cankerworm moths, tussock moths, gipsy moths, and other nonflying moths may be prevented from crawling up the trees by a wire screen (ordinary fly screen, 12 meshes to the inch) tacked around the tree trunk. Cut the wire screen into strips 12 inches wide and sufficiently long to encircle the trunk. Tack the upper edge of the screen so that it fits snugly to the bark and allow the lower edge to extend out a distance of 1 to 2 inches from the trunk. The moths will crawl up into the screen trap and may be crushed

Whole Milk Age.

the skimmed milk and feed it to the calf. After the calf is two weeks old it will eat fine ground meal and if fed small quantities will assimilate it. Linseed meal is also used.

Care should be taken in feeding calves. They should be taught to drink from the pail as soon as possible. Nothing but clean vessels should be used and the milk should be clean and warm.

Protect the Birds.

Approval has been given by the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives to the enabling Act providing for carrying into effect the treaty between the United States and Canada for the protection of migratory birds. Enactment of the pending legislation will ensure protection to non-game birds on both sides of the border and also will promote co-operation between the states in bird protection. The National Association of Audubon Societies is urging prompt passage of this enabling act by the House—it having passed the Senate last July—contending that it may properly be regarded as a war measure. If this war is to be won by the food crops of America the birds will prove an important factor; they destroy insects, weed seeds and rodent pests, and are in consequence conservators of crops.

War or no war, the bill is one that should be enacted into law. The fact that birds can and do contribute to crop conservation should ensure favorable action by Congress without further delay.—N. Y. Herald.

The Correct Time.

A certain platoon commander "somewhere in France" insisted upon obedience, instant and complete.

"Smith," he said to his servant recently. "I want you to go down to the railway station and get me the correct time."

Smith shuffled his feet and fidgeted with his fingers.

"Well, man," roared the officer, irately, "why don't you do as you are told?"

"Please, sir," replied the servant meekly, "I—I—haven't a watch!"

"A watch—a watch!" snapped the officer. "What d'ye want a watch for? Just write it down on a bit of paper!"

Wouldn't Gamble.

A thrifty father tells how he thought he had a great scheme for keeping order in his household. He noticed that his rather obstreperous young son had the quality of thriftiness, and resolved to appeal to it. "Sonny," said he, "I'm going to give you a nickel every day you're a good boy on condition that every day you are naughty you are to give me a nickel. Is it a go?" "I'd like to do it, dad," answered the kid. "But I can't afford it. I've only got $1.26 in my bank to start on."

Sleep Standing.

The elephant, apparently invariably, and the horse, commonly, sleep standing. Cattle usually sleep lying down, and during many hours of the day lie down.

EW COATS WITHOUT SLEEVES

rded Silk and Wool Poplins Among the Materials France Offers to America for These Garments.

France likes the sleeveless idea in rments so much that she has built new coats that drop over the shoul- ders but have no sleeves. This is a medieval idea that did not seem to interfere with the comfort of the men and women of the twelfth century, when the weather was cold and the houses 100 per cent colder.

Among the materials that France offers to America in the building of these sleeveless coats is a corded silk and wool poplin. It used to be worn by us. It was made into frocks and wraps and turned out in those dolmans that were trimmed with bugles and paillettes and edged with fur.

This season the dolman has been replaced by the loose, shapeless, sleeveless coat. This came over from France, where it was worn on one of the smart stages by an actress who knows how to dress.

All the American shops are looking to the French theater today for inspiration, and the theaters themselves have burst into a new bloom of life and beauty through the presence of so many thousands of American soldiers on leave with money in their pockets.

BONNET WITH QUAIN'T VEIL

Ofttimes the prettiest thing about a wonderful bonnet is the veil, though few young ladies have found this out. This hat, one of the most fascinating for spring and summer wear, proves it beyond a doubt. The hat, though very chic, is simply trimmed, and alone holds no special attraction, but attach this most charming veil to it and the combination is irresistible. The hat is of plain braided straw with a satin ribbon band. The veil is of very fine texture and falls in a new mode from the crown of the hat with a fullness that is most unusual and winning. The edge of the veil is trimmed with a dotted design, and the dots are extremely large for a veil. Altogether, spring looks mighty appealing, garbed thusly.

Children's Gowns.

The fashion for dressing children in velveteen has progressed apace, and few things lend themselves to little people's daytime clothes more happily. The colors range through gradations of pinks, reds, yellows, blues, greens and violets. Velveteen is also adapted to the hand embroidery which, in limited quantity, is such a feature of children's frocks.

New Coatees.

Very becoming over a black or some dark-hued frock is a black chiffon cloth or marquisee coatee pouching in sacquelike manner just above a high waistline, and edged with the whitest and fluffiest swansdown.

COLORFUL HATS HAVE CALL

Gobelin Blue, Rose Pink, Mandarin Yellow, Leaf Green and Scarlet Attached to Black, Favorites.

The milliners have especially laid stress upon hats in color, instead of black. The world should be quite weary of black on the head, for it has had six years of velvet, straw and satin in this cambray shade. We are now to wear gobelin blue, rose pink, mandarin yellow, leaf green and scarlet attached to black.

The turban is the thing, although there are women who cannot abide it, who look ill in it and who insist upon the brim.

If they do, they will be in fashion. There is no one law that governs the whole. The beaver dam turban, however, with its round crown, is a somewhat new note in millinery.

And another thing that is of interest is that the French milliners have taken the collar and put it on the hat. They have insisted for three years upon what is known as the fence collar—a wired, upstanding ruffle of organdie—and their women have liked and worn it with spirit and dash. Now it has gone up several inches and tries to cover the crown of a hat instead of the neck of a woman.

NURSING THE WOUNDED

It takes strength and courage to nurse the wounded. Every woman should make herself fit for war's call at home or abroad. Health and strength are within the reach of every woman. They are brought to you by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Take this medicine, and there's a safe and certain remedy for the chronic weaknesses, derangements, and diseases peculiar to women. It will build up, strengthen, and invigorate every "run-down" or delicate woman. It assists the natural functions.

At some period in her life, a woman requires a special tonic and nerve.

If you're a tired or afflicted woman, turn to "Favorite Prescription," you will find it never fails to benefit. Sold in tablet or liquid form. Send Dr. Pierce, Pres. Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., (or branch, Bridgeburg, Ont.) 10c for trial pkg. tablets.

Toronto, Ont.—"I found 'Favorite

Prescription' a splendid tonic for women. Some time ago I became all run-down, weak, nervous and could not eat or sleep. Had severe backaches, pains in my right side. I took Favorite Prescription and it completely built me up in health and relieved me of all the annoying pains and aches."—Mrs. THOMAS GRANTHAM, 425 Front St.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"During middle age, I began to go down in health. I would become dizzy, black spots would appear before my eyes. I also suffered with severe pains in the back of my head and my back would ache continually. I was most miserable when I began taking Favorite Prescription, but by its use I came through this critical period in a good healthy condition. It is a splendid medicine for women at this time of life."—Mrs. W. F. TRETZEL, 187 Bridge St.

Read Kaiser's Palm; Fined.

Ruth Smith, a fortune teller, boasted as a means of drawing clients that she told the fortune of the Kaiser twenty-seven years ago. When she was charged with telling fortunes a magistrate fined her $25, although he said he did not take into consideration her forecast of the future of the Kaiser.

W. J. Taylor, of Woodstock, has been elected president of the Canadian Press Association.

At a special meeting of the Town Council last week Mr. E. R. Todd was appointed official fish distributor for Government fish in the Town of Napanee.

Bridget McLusky, relict of the late James Murphy, Camden, died at Uptergrove at the residence of her son, James Murphy, on Wednesday, June 12th, aged 100 years, 8 months, 12 days. The funeral took place on Saturday to St. Anthony's cemetery, Centreville.

Ottawa announces that war saving stamps are soon to be introduced in Canada. They have proved a splendid success in the United States, where all classes of citizens, and especially children, have thereby been taught to save and invest their savings in war bonds. The buying of war stamps not only encourages thrift but helps the government to finance the war.

Capt. Gordon Carling, of the Army Service Corps, Kingston, met a sad death at Deseronto early Tuesday morning. He left Kingston last week to spend a few days at that place. On Monday evening he became very ill and doctors were called to attend him. They found that he had been drinking wood alcohol and that he was beyond recovery. About two o'clock in the morning he breathed his last.

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday, June 12th, at 11 a.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Denyes, Odessa, when their youngest daughter, Clva May N., was united in marriage to George Sutton Lucas, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lucas of Moscow, formerly of Odessa. Rev. Mr. Bedford, of Odessa Methodist church officiated. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a gown of blue silk poplin trimmed with Georgette silk crepe and the groom's gift, a pearl necklace. Only immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. About 2.30 p.m. the happy couple left by automobile for Belleville and Trenton. The high esteem of the bridal couple was shown by the many beautiful and useful gifts received. On their return they will reside at Moscow, Ont.

The Napanee people, who produced The Doctor's Private Secretary in Deseronto on Monday evening, were greeted with a packed house. The entertainment given was even better than the production given in Napanee.

Kingston, June 18th.—The announcement is made this evening that F. S. Evanson, of Prescott, has been appointed Secretary-Treasurer of the Oddfellows' Relief Association of Canada, succeeding the late Robert Meek of this city. Mr. Evanson will assume his new duties at headquarters here at once. He leaves to-night for Hamilton to attend the meetings of the Grand Lodge, I.O. O.F. of Ontario. Mr. Evanson has been Mayor of Prescott for some years, and is one of the most active Oddfellows in the Province. He is a Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario.

FARM BUILDINGS

are one of the clearest signs of the prosperity prevailing in any agricultural district.

A close observer driving along a country road and watching Buildings, Fences and the state of cultivation, can read the owner's character better than a fortune-teller. An old building like an old coat can be patched, and the old proverb, "A stitch in time" applies to buildings as well as clothes.

YOUR PROSPERITY

depends on ALL YOUR BUILDINGS being kept in the best possible state of repair so that all their contents will be preserved in first-class condition. A leaky roof, a rotten floor, and a cold pig pen or poultry house is a direct aid to the Kaiser.

AUTO HITS STORE.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. T. Scrimshaw met with an unfortunate accident on Dundas street. She was driving a new McLaughlin car which she had just learned to run and at the corner of Dundas and John streets, by some mischance, she hit the corner of Wallace's Drug Store. The large iron column supporting the corner of the building was jarred out of place about two inches and the woodwork under the window badly wrecked. The plate glass windows were not even cracked though both were moved out of place. The radiator on the car was badly smashed in and the glass in the windshield smashed. Mrs. Scrimshaw escaped with a slight cut on her face.

THE DOCTOR'S PRIVATE SECRETARY.

The unique entertainment put on at the armouries, under the auspices of the I.O.D.E., by Mr. Theodore Bird, played to crowded houses at Napanee on Thursday, and at Deseronto on Monday evening last. The play interested and amused the large audiences as on the first night and the choruses went with the same swing. The principals in the specialties, the Misses Wilson, McGreer and Roblin singing very sweetly with Messrs. Grothier, Weiss and Wolfe who were in fine voice, met with a warm reception and were given several encores, to which they kindly responded. The last evening—at Deseronto—wound up with a jolly, free-to-all dance; the stage of the opera house being quickly cleared for action the moment the play ended by Mr. Bird and his young men, aided by many of the aviators, many of whom participated in the dance.

LABOR DAYS.

On petition of the great majority of the Merchants and Profession men of Napanee, the Municipal Council have proclaimed the following LABOR DAYS THIS SUMMER: Wednesday, June 19th and 26th stores and offices will close at o'clock noon, and all Wednesdays during July and August they will remain closed all day. Object:—to assist in greater production.

Leave of Absence.

The Dominion Government will publish next week the procedure to be taken by draftees wishing leave of absence on grounds of extreme hardship. Forms of application may be obtained from an officer in each depot battalion, whose duty it is to give them immediate attention. The man concerned, should on reporting to a unit, state that he desires to apply for leave of absence on above ground. His papers will be forwarded to Canada and in the meantime he will given temporary leave until his case is finally disposed of.

A Card of Thanks.

The members of the "U.E. Loyalist Chapter, I.O.D.E., and its Committee of W. P. Service and R. C. work—desire to express their sincere thanks and appreciation for the kind and generous manner in which the appeal for automobiles was responded to, in order to transport "the company" and others for the performance of the production at Deseronto, and also for the generous aid given in this way on several occasions in the interests of the entertainment. The ladies all feel particularly grateful to the Baw for so kindly donating their service for Deseronto, and further desire again express their very deep appreciation for the aid given them by the ladies and gentlemen who made the undertaking such a pronounced success.

What Tourist Sleeping Cars mean in Comfort to the Traveller

The interior is somewhat more modest in appointment than the standard or first-class sleeping car. Of solid steel underframe, and with highly polished dark green finish, the Canadian Northern's tourist cars present a very pleasing appearance. The interior is finished in mahogany, with aisle carpet to match and cork composition flooring to deaden sound and lessen vibration.
Commodious smoking room and toilet;
kitchenette with appliances for light cooking, running water, etc., are greatly appreciated. Roomy berths, accommodating two persons if desired,
are just one-half the first-class rate.
Second-class ticket holders may also occupy these cars, and the Dining Car is always available at meal time.
Trains leave Toronto Union Station
11 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for Winnipeg and points west.
For information, literature, tickets and reservations, apply to nearest
C.N.R. Ticket Agent, or write General

Dear Madam,—

The King and Queen deeply regret to hear of the loss you and the army have sustained by the death of your son in the service of his country, and I am recommended to convey to you the expression of their Majesties' true

The chicks should be gone over for lice—the head lice are the worst. If the brooder and the surroundings are kept clean as possible there should not be much fear of head lice.
Should they appear, however, an application of ointment of some kind should be used at once. If this is not

HEAD LICE IN CHICKENS.

The chicks should be gone over for lice—the head lice are the worst. If the brooder and the surroundings are kept clean as possible there should not be much fear of head lice. Should they appear, however, an application of ointment of some kind should be used at once. If this is not available, use vaseline, olive oil or sulphur and lard. Every head will have to be gone over and the treatment will have to be repeated in a week. It is a troublesome task to go over several hundred young chicks, but it must be done, each head by itself. Rub the paste well into the scalp and around the ears. Some use coal oil, but it is too severe and has been known to kill the chicks about as quickly as lice. Head lice in chicks are sometimes hard to locate. The chicks may be listless, getting thin, wings down, feathers ruffled, and dying off one by one. Upon examining the heads one can see nothing running around and all that appears is what looks like young feathers sprouting out of the head. To make sure that they are there, take some of the ointment and apply thoroughly to the head. Put the chick in a box and examine in a few minutes time. The young feathers will be gone and large bodied lice will be running for their lives. The "feathers" were the abdomens of the lice, the head and rest of the bodies being buried into the head of the chick eating away at the tissue. It takes only a few days to have a whole flock cleaned out. Absolute cleanliness is the best preventive.
